Series of quakes hits San Francisco

BERKELEY (AP) — A "swarm" of earthquakes socked the San Francisco Bay area Saturday, awakening thousands of residents and lighting up police switchboards. Little damage and no injuries were reported.

The University of California Seismographic Station said a quake at 1:38 a.m. PST measured 4.6 on the Richter scale, the area's strongest quake in more than a decade.

Station director Bruce Bolt said numerous mild aftershocks followed eight quakes Friday night and early Saturday. He said he expected another quake of about 3.0 — strong enough to be felt but not to do damage — to occur by late today followed by a week of very mild aftershocks that wouldn't be felt.

"This is what is known as a swarm of earthquakes," Bolt said. "They're fading away."

He said, however, that he was much relieved that the quakes did not take place on the Hayward Fault or other major faults. If they had, he said, they might have been a precursor for a larger quake.

The quakes were centered on an unnamed fault between Berkeley and nearby Walnut Creek, but were felt at the western edge of San Francisco, 25 miles away.

The 4.6 quake was the strongest in this area since May 5, 1965 when a comparable earthquake hit Antioch, 35 miles northeast of here. By contrast, the devastating 1906 earthquake in San Francisco would have measured about 8.25 on the Richter scale, invented after that quake.

Generally, a quake of 4.0 is considered strong enough to do some damage in a local area, subject to variations in construction and building sites. Bolt said a quake would have to be at least 5.5 to cause substantial damage.

Bolt said the quakes occurred between 10:55 p.m. Friday and 1:52 a.m. Saturday, ranging from 2.9 to 4.1. They were followed by a series of aftershocks that could not be felt.

The San Francisco Police Department said it handled 2,500 calls during the quake period, including one from a resident who said his ceiling was cracked by the 1:38 quake and another who said his chandelier was knocked down by a 4.0 quake at 12:58 a.m.

Ruth Brockman, chief police telephone operator, said, "The switchboard was lit up and some people said it took them 20 minutes to get through."

Police departments in the East Bay cities of Oakland, Berkeley, Walnut Creek, Pleasant Hill and Concord reported many calls but no damage.

Contra Costa County Sheriff's dispatcher Jessie Wilson said, "It was felt severely in the area. One clerk said she never prayed before in this building, but she did last night. It really rocked the place."

The Richter Scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Carter, Mondale trips planned

Clear skies ahead

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Cool, clear weather should prevail for the Super Bowl in Pasadena today, with no rain forecast to mar the annual football game.

The National Weather Service predicted fair skies through Monday, with slightly warmer afternoons. The temperature should be around 65 by game time this afternoon.

Motorists heading for the snow at Mt. Baldy or other recreational areas were being warned of extremely heavy traffic. Those wanting a look at the white stuff were jamming Mt. Baldy Road Saturday, with the same expected for today.

Cars were stopped, bumper to bumper, along Mt. Baldy Road and the California Highway Patrol was not allowing autos into the village unless there was parking space.

Chains were recommended but not required at Mt. Baldy, according to the CHP.

Highway 39 leading to Crystal Lake above Azusa was also jammed with heavy traffic and closed for a while on Saturday afternoon.

While warmer temperatures were predicted for the afternoons, cold weather will prevail at night, with readings perhaps as low as 35 according to the weatherman.

WAREHOUSE BLAZE . . .

Firemen on aerial ladders pour water onto a complex of vacant warehouses Saturday in lower Manhattan. The seven-alarm fire was the largest in New York in eight years. Nine firemen were slightly injured in the blaze, fanned by 30 m.p.h. winds.

Sending V.P.-elect to Europe and Japan first week in office

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Carter said Saturday he will send Vice Presidentelect Walter F. Mondale on a get-acquainted trip to Europe and Japan the first week of the Carter administration.

The president-elect said he himself probably will attend an economic summit meeting of the world's industrialized democracies this year, probably in late May or June.

Carter also said he likely will meet with Soviet party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev sometime before next fall and hopes by that time to have achieved "substantial" progress on a new strategic arms limitation treaty.

On another subject, Carter said he has every hope that tax rebate checks, a key element of his plan to stimulate the lagging economy, will be sent to millions of taxpayers by early spring.

Carter said he still intends to minimize his own travel in the first year of his administration but would make an exception for the economic summit.

Carter talked to reporters at a chilly outdoor news conference on the lawn of his home.

"I've asked Sen. Mondale to go to West Germany, to France, to Great Britain, to the European Community headquarters in Brussels and also to Japan," Carter said.

He said arrangements for the trip already have been made and that he will speak with the prime ministers or leaders of those nations by telephone sometime next week.

He said the purpose of the Mondale trip is to let America's closest allies "know in some detail what I and the United States Congress propose to do about the stimulation of our economy.

"In addition to that he will explore with them better means by which we might coordinate our NATO policies, deal with the problems of the increased oil prices, and also share with them some of our potential plans at that point for helping to resolve the potential problems surrounding Cyprus and Turkey and Greece, the Middle East, and of course the southern Africa question."

In the latter case Carter said that the United States plans to play a supportive role and will not pre-empt the leadership position taken by the government of Great Britain.

Carter said he himself probably will meet with the leaders of the nations Mondale will visit later in the year, "probably in the framework of an economic summit meeting."

Anthony Eden ill in Florida; flown home

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden, who succeeded Winston Churchill in the office, became seriously ill during a visit to Florida and a Royal Air Force plane was sent Saturday to take him home to England, sources said.

The 79-year-old Eden, who has the title of Lord Avon, was stricken while visiting friends in the Palm Beach area. Eden, who served as prime minister from 1955 to 1957, has been in failing health for some years.

Various sources said the statesman, who also served as British foreign secretary, had been visiting the winter home of his longtime friend, American diplomat Averell Harriman. It could not be confirmed that he was at the Harriman residence, in exclusive Hobe Sound north of Palm Beach, when he became ill.

A spokesman for Prime Minister James Callaghan's office in London said that an RAF plane was dispatched after the family requested that Eden be brought home.

He declined to specify the former Conservative Party Leader's illness and said the family had requested "minimum publicity."

Ill health was one of the reasons given for Eden's relinquishing the prime minister's job in January 1957.

He was succeeded by Harold MacMillan, also of the Conservative party. The present British government is controlled by the Labor party.

Boycott to spur move to stabilize coffee prices?

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, noting the New York call for a coffee boycott, proposed Saturday that Colombia and Brazil join to stabilize coffee prices at "reasonable levels."

In a telegram to Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel, Lopez said the New York City Department for Consumer Affairs supports a coffee boycott and "if this boycott is somehow successful it would represent a serious blow for the policy of accord sponsored by your government and mine.

"It is for this reason that I consider it indispensable to ask you if the most convenient thing for our countries, and in general for all producers, would not be to try to stabilize prices at present levels or at those levels that we judge more appropriate."

In his reply, Geisel suggested instead the calling of a special meeting of the International Coffee Organization (ICO) that represents both exporters and importers "to review the supply problem in the critical years of 1977-78."

Brazil and Colombia are by far the world's biggest coffee exporters. ICO figures for the "coffee year" from October 1975 through September 1976 show Brazil exported 13.01 million bags and Colombia 7.02 million. A bag contains 132 pounds of coffee.

The price of coffee in the United States jumped from $1.25 a pound to $3 in the past year.

Producers say supply and demand is the reason for the price hikes, and one reason the supply is dwindling is a frost that killed much of Brazil's crop in 1975.

In his message, Lopez said he wanted "to see if we can jointly find a just, timely and satisfactory solution to the high levels reached by coffee prices abroad which seem to have begun having an impact consumption."

He added that if Brazil and Colombia would take the market "under our control" they would be taking it away from speculators "who may act either in favor of big increases or of dangerous and sharp decreases in prices."

Lopez said that "by doing this it would be perhaps the first time that producers of a popular product decide to work together for a temporary freeze in prices, a precedent that would put us in a position to limit, as well, any decrease in the future."

He offered to send a mission to Brazil to discuss the proposal but also said, "We could nevertheless adopt joint steps with the United States, Mexico, Central America, Uganda and the Ivory Coast."

Geisel agreed that "we should unite our efforts in search of a policy that guarantees the tranquility of the coffee market, whose present prices stem ... from the shortage of the product, due to natural and known causes."

But he said he preferred expanding any meeting to the IOC.

Budget head faced probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas B. Lance, named budget director by Jimmy Carter, was investigated last year for possible election-law violations in Lance's 1974 campaign for governor of Georgia. But sources say the Justice Department decided there were no grounds for prosecution.

2 men nearly electrocuted as antenna hits power line

Two Hacienda Heights men suffered severe electrical shock Saturday when a radio antenna they were removing from the roof of a home touched a power line.

Jerry Horn, 42, of 1428 Sharlemont Ave., and Patrick Radecker, 36, of 1422 Sharlemont, were reported in critical condition at Queen of the Valley Hospital after the 1:30 p.m. accident.

Sheriff's deputies said the men were removing a 30-foot Citizens' Band radio antenna from the roof of Horn's house. They lost control of the antenna due to the wind and it touched a 6,900-volt power line.

Both men were knocked unconscious but were revived by fire department paramedics after 30 minutes and then rushed to the West Covina hospital.

Couple injured as plane crash-lands in Montclair

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

A Thousand Oaks couple was injured Saturday morning when their single-engine Starduster biplane developed engine trouble and crashed in a vacant lot near Montclair High.

Solmi told police that he and his wife left Ventura at 10 a.m. and were bound for an air show at Cable Airport in Upland.

He said that his aircraft developed engine trouble at about 3,000 feet. He circled and tried to land in a vacant field in the 9900 block of Camulos Avenue, south of Benito Avenue.

Solmi was able to avoid houses nearby and the busy Montclair High athletic field.

Mike Ross of Montclair, a soccer coach, said he and the team saw the plane pass overhead and heard the engine sputter.

"The guy's engine stopped running and he went down real fast," Ross said.

Another soccer coach, Jack Gravener, said that he thought the plane "was going to land right on top of us. The guy's engine conked out and we started yelling for everyone to get off the field and to look for cover. I was afraid the plane might explode or something."

The injured couple was taken by ambulance to the hospital.

A police spokesman said he thinks the plane crash was the first in the city's history.

CRASH LANDING

It was a scary but lucky experience for Gary Solmi and his wife Myrna Saturday morning. The Thousand Oaks couple were on their way to an air show at Cable Airport in Upland when the small plane they were flying crashed in an emergency landing in a vacant field near Montclair High School. Both required hospitalization, but were not seriously injured.

Hope dim Sinatra mom, others alive

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Authorities held out little hope Saturday that Frank Sinatra's mother or three other persons on a missing private jet might be found alive.

Mountain climbers fought snow and high winds to search for the missing twin-engine jet on the highest reaches of Southern California's tallest peak. A helicopter was sent aloft, but there was no word of any sighting.

Lawmakers vow veto override, death penalty law

— Ayala

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

Valley lawmakers have little sympathy for Governor Brown's stand opposing restoration of the death penalty in California.

To a man, they vow to support death penalty legislation. If the Governor vetoes that legislation, as he has promised he shall, they pledge to support an override.

Assemblyman Bill McVittie, D-35th Dist., Upland, is the author of AB 23, the first bill introduced in the Legislature this session attempting to reinstate the death penalty.

"I intend to play an active role in seeing that a capital punishment bill gets through both houses of the Legislature and into the lawbooks," said McVittie.

"If part of the work involves overriding a Governor's veto, then I will vote to do that as well.

"And if it proves impossible to round up the two-thirds vote necessary to override a veto, then I intend to be in the forefront of an initiative campaign whereby the people once again will write a death penalty law for California."

"I don't agree with those officials who said Governor Brown was courageous," said Sen. Ruben S. Ayala, D-32nd Dist., Chino.

"I feel elected officials have one purpose, to represent the people, their thinking. There may be cases when an elected official, because of day-to-day study and involvement, is better informed than the people, who learn most from reading newspapers.

"But on this issue, there is no misunderstanding. It is understood by everyone. The people of California, in 1972, restored the death penalty by a better than 2-to-1 vote.

"It is my opinion that the governor should spell out the fact that his conscience does not permit him to sign death penalty legislation, that he disagrees with the people. But, I don't think he should say he will veto that legislation.

"He should say he will allow it to become law without his signature.

"It is the mood of the people of California that the death penalty is a deterent to crime," said Ayala.

Maximum sentences of life in prison do not stop murderers from murdering, he claimed. "The murderer can go on killing inside the prison. There is nothing more that can be done to him.

"If the death penalty legislation gets to the Governor's office and he vetoes it, I will support the override. And, it's coming to that. The people of California have spoken."

Ayala said he had just returned from the funeral for James M. Base, 20, Pomona, who was shot to death in Pomona last Monday night.

"It was so tragic," said Ayala. "The survivors were torn to pieces. We must follow due process of law, but we also must consider victims of crime and their families. The people must be protected."

Assemblyman Bill Lancaster, R-62nd Dist., Covina, said that the Governor, in his very brief State of the State message, had outlined some of the very serious problems facing the people of California.

"Because of the briefness of his remarks, he did not get into details of these problems, or their solutions," said Lancaster.

"I thoroughly disagree with his comments on the death penalty. I respect the concerns of his conscience. However, I feel it is mandatory that the state pass a death penalty statute in view of the overwhelming desire of the people of the state of California as expressed by their 2-to-1 vote in 1972."

"The governor has got guts. I'll say that for him," said Assemblyman M. David Stirling, R-64th Dist., Hacienda Heights.

"It's a bad move for him, no question in my mind about that. The people want the death penalty reinstated. It is no great thrill for me, but I support the death penalty. I feel it is a deterent to crime. I do see the Legislature putting the death penalty bill back on the Governor's desk, and he will veto it.

"I will support an override, but I doubt we have the votes for that, the Democrats will not buck the Governor on this one, and it will be another initiative.

"Governor Brown said two years ago he did not favor the death penalty, but he would abide by the will of the people. He has done a complete flip-flop on this one.

"If it goes to an initiative, it will come up right at the time of Brown's re-election. That will be a tough one."

Sen. William Campbell, R-33rd Dist., Hacienda Heights, said, "I think he (Governor Brown) is wrong on this one. I support death penalty legislation, I will vote to override the Governor's veto, and beyond that, I will support a ballot initiative to allow the people of California another vote on the death penalty.

"I feel the death penalty is a deterent to crime. We just have to have this one."

Economy growth expected to ease in '77

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rate of growth in the economy this year will probably be slower than last year, the Commerce Department said Saturday. But it added the growth should be enough to reduce unemployment without stimulating inflation.

The broad economic assessment was given by chief economist John W. Kendrick as part of the agency's annual industrial outlook publication. It was written before President-elect Carter unveiled his $30 billion economic stimulus package Friday.

Kendrick said the rise in consumer prices in 1977 is projected to remain close to last year's gain of less than 6 per cent.

With the help of the government's massive computer model of the U.S. economy, Kendrick forecast a growth rate of 5 per cent in the volume of total economic output this year with the possibility of "somewhat faster" growth through a tax rebate and other stimuli.

That's a slower pace of growth than the 6 per cent expected for 1976 as a whole when the final figures are tabulated. But that would still be an improvement over the mid-1976 performance, when economic growth was at annual rates of 4.5 per cent in the April-June quarter and 3.9 per cent in the July-September period.

Kendrick estimated that even without stimulus, growth should be strong enough to cut unemployment, currently at 8.1 per cent, to an average of 7 per cent for the year.

He also cited several encouraging factors on inflation: no major imbalances between business inventories and sales; no signs of materials bottlenecks which fueled inflation in 1973, and adequate excess industrial capacity to absorb the expected growth in output without quickening the pace of inflation.

Kendrick said current policies imply slow progress in reducing the unemployment rate after 1977.

"This would suggest the need for new economic policies if the nation is to return to relatively full employment by 1980 and simultaneously continue to unwind from inflation," he said.

Kendrick describes himself as an independent politically. He assumed his post at Commerce this summer on leave from George Washington University in the capital.

10 jailed for tossing snowballs; drivers hurt

Ten persons were arrested in connection with snowball throwing incidents which injured at least two motorists on Mt. Baldy Road north of Claremont.

San Dimas sheriff's deputies said about four cars were damaged when large clumps of snow were apparently thrown from a passing car on Mt. Baldy Road south of the tunnels late Friday night.

Wayne Miozza, 19, of Azusa, and Joey Williamson, 21, of Baldwin Park, suffered facial and hand cuts when their car's windshield was shattered by a snowball.

Timothy Burkhart, 23, of Chino, whose car was damaged by a snowball, chased the suspects and attracted attention of a highway patrol officer who managed to stop the suspects' auto.

Five adults and five juveniles were booked by San Dimas Sheriff's deputies for throwing snowballs with intent to do bodily harm. The adults, all Pomona residents, are Paul Garcia, 19, Ruben Partilla, 20, Peter Parilla, 19, Larry Perchez, 25, Diana Perchez, 20 and Diana Perchez, 20.

U.N. dues increase $7 million for U.S.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. dues for the United Nations are increasing more than $7 million this year and total $99,397,207, according to the world body's new assessment list.

The assessments are based on ability to pay as measured by gross national product. The United States pays the biggest share of the U.N. budget, 25 per cent. The Soviet Union's 11.33 per cent is second.

The 1977 budget totals $352,901,765, compared with a 1976 budget of $332,587,378.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union is refusing to pay a large part of the $16.5 million the U.N. Secretariat claims is its share of the cost of the U.N. peacekeeping forces in the Middle East, on the Golan Heights and in the Sinai Desert.

Motorcyclist hurt, rescued by helicopter

John Stevenson, 20, of Brea, fell from his cycle while riding atop a knoll at the park, off Dudley Street and the Corona Expressway, at 11:40 a.m. He suffered a broken ankle and was airlifted to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was listed in fair condition.

Arrest may clear up 23 burglaries

Montclair police said Saturday that the arrest of a Pico Rivera man may have cleared up 23 commercial burglaries in the West End area.

Ernesto Mendoza Munoz, 26, was arrested Friday morning as he came through the window of the Islander restaurant, 4620 Holt Blvd.

Officers discovered a broken window on the south side of the building, and at that instant Munoz crawled out of the window, a pry bar in his hand.

Patrol officers Don Farrington and Marvin Goss said they discovered a televison set and several cases of liquor stacked by the door of the restaurant near Munoz' parked car.

Fireplugs burn up his honor

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — One judge is so burned up about this town's new fireplugs that he's throwing out all tickets issued for parking near them.

Judge John A. Griffin says the hydrants, which are short, fat and top-heavy, don't look like fireplugs. "I don't think there's a self-respecting dog in the entire state that would use one," he said.

Griffin became concerned when an elderly gentleman came in with a parking ticket and a picture of one new hydrant two weeks ago.

"He showed me the picture and said, 'This isn't a fireplug,'" Griffin said. "Well, if it was a fireplug it didn't look like one."

Griffin dismissed the case and has since dismissed a dozen others.

Water company official John Perry says the neutral-colored hydrants were installed "because of their aesthetic value."

Griffin requested the hydrants come accompanied with the usual red curb, but Perry said: "That would destroy the aesthetics."

Chains hit by patrol

Certain tire chains for use in snow now being sold to Valley motorists going into the mountains do not meet legal requirements in chain control areas of California cautioned Capt. Jim Perkins, commander to the California Highway Patrol office in Ontario.

Capt. Perkins said motorists purchasing tire chains should look for the terms "For use on California Highways," or "Approved by the California Highway Patrol." The approved chains should have numbers or letters engraved in the chains.

Perkins said if motorists are in doubt as to what chains are "approved" they may call the Highway Patrol office for information.

He explained there are two types of tire chains one, "regular tire chains", and the other "special tire chains." Both can be used on California highways if they bear the approval stamp on their containers or have engraved numbers.

Perkins explained that there are a number of tire chain companies that use inferior metals and cause the chain to break after minimual use. Other types of chains, like some used in the mountain states or in the east where large amounts of snow fall have groves or are so engineered that they cause considerable damage to the highway, are also illegal in California.

Perkins also warned motorists to heed all signs on the mountain highways telling motorists to use chains. Tire chains are required on all vehicles when the appropriate control signs are posted. Drivers of passenger vehicles or pickup trucks, or four wheel drive vehicles, will be allowed to proceed with snow tread tires when control signs indicate the road surface is safe for this type of tire. However, such motorists will still be required to carry chains in their vehicles.

Whisky bottle 'blues'

WEST RIDGE, Ill. (AP) — Whisky, whisky everywhere and not a drop to drink — it may be the most frustrating experience of the New Year's weekend and one shared by two railroad detectives.

The detectives for the Missouri Pacific Railroad stood guard over two whisky-filled box cars that had derailed Friday and were under the usual prohibition not to drink on the job.

The whisky, valued at more than $100,000, had appropriately toppled off the tracks in a cornfield.

L.A. major crime down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police say major crime in the city dropped in 1976 as the numbers of reported murders fell 14.9 per cent and burglaries decreased 4.8 per cent.

Statistics reported Thursday indicated a 2.1 total decline in reports of major crimes.

But the police department said 1976 was a record year for bank robberies. The number increased from 245 to 246 but police said bank robbers didn't get away with as much money in 1976 as in 1975.

The FBI said Los Angeles was one of 15 large American cities in which reported crime declined from 1975 figures.

To buy school sites

Walnut 'bond' sale approved

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors has approved the sale of $1.54 million worth of school bonds by the Walnut Valley Unified School District.

Monies received from the sale are expected to go toward acquisition of a new elementary school site and development of Del Paso Continuation High School by converting the existing Walnut Elementary School on Lemon Avenue next door to the school district offices south of Valley Boulevard. A new Walnut Elementary School is presently under construction.

A circular advertising the availability was approved by the board for nation-wide distribution at its regular meeting Monday at Walnut High School.

Supt. David Brown explained that for the district to maintain its full borrowing potential from the state allocations board which loans money for capital improvements by school districts, the district must maintain a bonded indebtedness equal to 10 per cent of its assessed valuation. In recent years, inflation, continuing development in the district and the yearly repayment on loans have all served to reduce the district's bonded indebtedness. Brown said the district must now sell additional bonds to maintain its 10 per cent level and thus qualify for the much needed state funding for land acquisition and development of the continuation high school.

The elementary site to be acquired with the new funds remains a question-mark. Historically, the board has never paid more than $340,000 for an elementary school site but the price for the finished (graded) site 33 at Mountain Laurel and Maple Hill Avenues will run anywhere from $750,000 to $1 million.

Since the district is interested in acquiring sites already graded for development, the rough terrain at that location will drive development costs up. The terrain along with inflation — houses in the area have nearly doubled in value in the past four or five years — has driven the price upward.

The increased costs have caused some board members to take a second look at site 33 and exercise caution.

While the price is high, site 33 enjoys a unique location. Located near the Hills' tract, it will eventually serve approximately 760 youngsters. Also, a high pressure gas line running through the area makes other sites less practical because of state laws forbidding construction of schools within certain distances of such gas lines.

In the meantime, the board has asked for appraisal of an additional property east of Diamond Bar Boulevard. That appraisal should be returned to the board by February and, depending on its findings, the board may choose to either continue or forgo acquisition of site 33.

Nursing program approved

Foothill Presbyterian Hospital in Glendora has been granted approval as a "provider of continuing education for registered nurses" by the California Board of Registered Nursing.

To maintain licensure, state law requires nurses to earn 30 hours of continuing education credit every two years. It is the board's policy to make on-site inspections of continuing education program records to insure the standard of quality is maintained.

The programs, which will begin in January, will be administered by Luella Gongwer, director of the hospital's nursing services department. "Update on Diabetes for Registered Nurses" and "How to Teach so Patients Can Learn" are tentatively scheduled for Jan. 17 and Feb. 16 and will earn four hours credit each.

BRIDGE WHIZ — Regina Barnes of Modesto is the youngest life master in contract bridge history. She earned her gold card shortly after her 15th birthday.

Youngest life master

From bubble gum to bridge champ

By JOE BIGHAM
Associated Press Writer

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — When Regina Barnes plays bridge, she chews gum and blows bubbles to help her concentrate. Think twice before you criticize the habit, because she's one of the best players in the country. Besides, she's only 15.

Miss Barnes is the youngest life master in bridge history, certified by the American Contract Bridge League.

She earned the coveted gold card last February when she was 14, realizing a goal she began pursuing at age 9.

"I wanted to do it by my 15th birthday," she said. "I was really happy it was over with, relieved that there was no more pressure."

It takes 300 points won painstakingly bit by bit over the years to become a life master of the league. Points — or often just fractions of a point — are earned by finishing near the top in duplicate bridge tournaments.

During the year before Miss Barnes reached her goal, she kept her grades at honor level but had to give up the usual high school fun to concentrate on bridge games with her father.

"When I was trying to become life master, we played almost every weekend, sometimes twice a week at night," she said. "During the summer, we played a whole bunch."

She built up 190 points in 10 months to go with just the 110 she won during her first four years of play.

Several veteran players asked her to be their partner in various tournaments, which helped her compile more master points.

"But my favorite partner is my dad," she said. "We've just played together longer — and besides, he's my dad."

She learned the game by kibitzing when her father, Charles, played. Miss Barnes also read bridge books and took lessons. They won a novice tournament together and have been a team ever since.

"I sure am proud of her. She's better than I ever was," said Barnes, who won his life master card in 1974.

With her main goal achieved, she now rarely plays in tournaments. Regina said she's concentrating on the football games and dances she missed last year and learning to drive so she can get her license when she turns 16.

And she knows that her own fame is as fleeting as the next successful challenger. She said a 12-year-old from Palo Alto, Calif., Steve Cochrane, "wants to beat my record."

Claremont plans occupation show

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

The Career Center at Claremont High will sponsor an ROP Faire in the central quad of the school Monday from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Teachers and Claremont High students in various classes of the Baldy View Regional Occupational Program will provide demonstrations and present exhibits.

Among the classes who will exhibit are the following:

—Nursing assistant training at Ontario Community Hospital. Students will take blood pressure.

—Aircraft mechanics class at Mt. San Antonio College.

—Graphics reproductions at San Dimas High. Silk screening will be demonstrated.

—Greenhouse nursery at the Del Mar campus.

—Radio and television repair at Chaffey High.

The faire is one of the services offered by the career center where center personnel have since September talked to 13 classes of 325 students about career resources available.

During the month preceding Christmas vacation, 1,255 students and 149 teachers, counselors and community members visited the center.

Fifteen students have worked in the center as aides and have gained a learning experience as well as being a service to the school.

JoAnn Sorrensen, career guidance teacher, and Gayle Ginsburg, career technician, guide visitors around the career center which is stocked with audio-visual materials, telling about various careers, job attitudes, job interviews, and what a person should know before he goes to work; colleges catalogs; occupational files; interest tests; information on all branches of the Armed Forces and the Peace Corps; and ROP brochures.

Also available is a computer guidance information system.

Mrs. Sorrensen invites students to tkae the Armed Vocational Aptitude Battery and other tests available to learn vocational fields for which they are qualified.

Mrs. Ginsburg will be on hand Monday to enroll students in one of the hundreds of ROP classes available in the two-county area.

All but forgotten on a windswept little hill

By ROBERT LOCKE

EAGLE NEST, N.M. (AP) — The Vietnam Veterans Peace and Brotherhood Chapel stands, stark and alone, as a monument to a father's love and grief.

And it seems all but forgotten — except by the man who built it on a windswept little hill in northeast New Mexico.

Dr. Victor Westphall, a 63-year-old historian and author, spent five years building the chapel, mostly with his own hands.

"How significant or how important it is, I just don't know," he said. "We just do what we must."

It is, he said, "a tiny cry in the wilderness."

The winding walkway to the chapel is lined with markers, each on a one-foot pedestal, bearing the names of Americans who died in Indochina:

Robert Harris, Kentucky ... Davis F. Brown, Florida ... Denver Borkheimer, Oklahoma ... Rolando Hernandez, Texas ... Salvatore Armato, New York ... Andrew Kirchmayer, Wisconsin ... David Westphall, New Mexico ...

Lt. David Westphall of the U.S. Marine Corps died on May 22, 1968, when his company was ambushed in the South Vietnamese jungle. Twelve other Marines died with him.

The inside walls of the chapel are bare, except for 13 photographs on the curving north wall.

The faces and names of the dead, Westphall said, give reality to the numbers nations use to report the casualties of war.

"People forget," he said. "The significance of war becomes more like a game than a deadly contest in the eyes of most people, particularly if they are not in it."

He wonders if people already have forgotten.

Donations to the nonprofit corporation that operates the chapel have dwindled to barely a trickle, he said, and a search for support from charitable foundations was fruitless.

The chapel, located just off U.S. 64 and 20 miles south of Eagle Nest, remains an orphan, supported by the family that conceived and nurtured it.

It is not marked on official state maps. Bills proposed in Congress to have the chapel designated a national memorial flounder without action.

Visitors, who Westphall said once numbered more than 25,000 a year, come less frequently now.

"After all this time," Westphall said, "the chapel is open only when I'm here with the key to open it."

Volunteers no longer come to help staff it.

"Some people have come long distances just to see it, and it's not been open. That's a cross for me to bear."

Westphall said the lack of interest baffles him.

"I see a very definite trend where the vast majority of people want to do things the easy way. I think that may be why Vietnam veterans have been pushed into the background. It's just the easiest thing to forget about it, to sweep it under the rug.

"There may be an element of shame in the minds of the American people. They want to forget about Vietnam. But mankind can forget the lessons of that war only at his own peril."

The chapel, he said, "is dedicated to peace. It's not a war memorial. And as far as I know, it's the only memorial to all Vietnam veterans (of all nations) throughout the world. In a broader sense, it is for all soldiers of all times."

His albums include 75 pictures, he said, and new photos still are added infrequently.

"The majority of the families bring them in person. That's a surprising thing," Westphall said. "It's as if the picture is something too precious to be sent through the mail."

The result is the chapel.

Planners approve study

The Claremont Planning Commission his week unanimously recommended that the City Council approve a zone change which would allow the use of land east of the Rancho Santa Botanic Garden as a field station for scientific study of the natural environment.

The Robert J. Bernard Biological Station of the Claremont Colleges will extend to the south to Foothill Boulevard and to the east to Mills Avenue on land presently zoned educational.

The land east of the Botanic Garden is zoned for single family homes.

The commission was told that the Claremont University Center does not intend to make any public improvements, utility extensions nor on-site improvements except for a fence to border the field station.

It is estimated that between 1,397 and 3,056 college students will take courses using the area during the coming spring semester.

In other matters, the commission continued its review of the art fair at the Griswold complex, because owner Sandy Sanford will bring to the Jan. 18 commission meeting a detailed site plan for future art fairs.

The commission approved a conditional use permit for a residential unit development to allow 32 homes on 9.8 acres south of Base Line Road between Forbes and Mills avenues.

The commission also approved a conditional use permit to allow the sale of beer and wine in conjunction with a restaurant operated by Ronald P. Mittino at 138 N. Indian Hill Blvd., a location formerly used by the Robert the Great Restaurant.

The commission granted an extension of one year to Barmakian, Wolff and Associates on its parcel map which covers the triangle bounded by Claremont and Foothill boulevards and the county line. Water is not available for the site the firm is developing.

Unwinding in stitches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Needlepoint, the art of creating a picture by filling a canvas with tiny identical stitches, has become many a modern man's tool to help him unwind from a long day at the office.

Saying that it helps them quit smoking, relax tensions or just plain pass the time, men like Spiro Agnew and Roosevelt Grier have taken up what used to be considered an all-female art. Ex-football tackle Grier even wrote a book about it.

Israeli drivers worst rated

By TED KLEIN

TEL AVIV (AP) — Driving stunts like passing on the right and failing to stop at pedestrian crossings make Israeli drivers among the world's worst, says a national driving safety official.

"As far as fatalities, Israel is not the worst in the world, but I agree that the drivers are the worst in the world. It gets on one's nerves to drive here," says David Tel-Nir, secretary general of the National Council for the Prevention of Accidents. Tel-Nir said he had driven throughout Western Europe and the United States.

With 16.4 annual traffic deaths per 100,000 population, Israel ranks well behind France 25.6, West Germany 25.9 and the United States 26.5 in auto accident fatalities, according to the U.S. National Safety Council.

This small nation has 419,000 motor vehicles but there were 14,309 accidents involving casualties in 1975 — 648 victims killed and 20,478 injured. The American State of Delaware, which has about the same number of cars as Israel, recorded 4,129 accidents in 1974.

Since 1967, 5,545 persons have died on Israel's roads while 5,359 persons perished during military action in two major wars and numerous terrorist attacks.

Israelis have slightly reduced their automobile accident and fatality rates since 1974 but safety officials don't foresee any decline in the most irksome factor in traffic wrecks — impatient, wild drivers.

"Israelis by and large do not behave politely anywhere, whether they are in a supermarket or on the road. Many accidents happen simply because of rude driving manners," says Tel-Nir.

Drivers in the Jewish state are clearly an irritable lot. Of the 495 persons killed in traffic accidents in the first 10 months of 1976, nearly half were pedestrians. Authorities claim the largest single cause of accidents is tailgating.

"I thought I was a hot-rodder in the States," said a Columbus, Ohio, rabbi now teaching in Tel Aviv. "But I've never seen anything like the drivers here. Actually I was frightened during a taxi ride. The man next to me said to look at it through the eyes of the driver — time is money — so he has to go as fast as he can."

Besides the itchiness of the drivers, safety officials cite these factors as contributing to Israel's accident total: many first-generation car owners, the high cost of spare parts causing many car owners to delay needed repairs.

Chinese artist plans painting demonstration

Claremont artist Ning Yeh will demonstrate his technique at a meeting of the Associated Artists at the Ontario Public Library at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday. The public is invited.

Yeh was born in Hunan, China. He was named Ning, meaning tranquility, to celebrate the ending of the war in 1949. His father, a retired army general, has become known internationally for his art of horse painting. His paintings have been presented as state gifts from the Republic of China to many world leaders, including President Eisenhower, President Johnson and Vice President Rockefeller.

Yeh, being the eldest son, was encouraged to carry on his artistic heritage. His mother, also a talented artist, supervised her young son's training. After years of basic art training, at the age of 15 he turned to the painting of horses. At 17 he was winning national recognition.

"Art" Yeh states, "is the only significant form of communication that can stand alone on neutral ground for all people to see, appreciate and understand."

His demonstrations have become a feature at the Fine Arts Galleries of the Los Angeles County Fair. He conducts classes on Oriental brush painting at several local colleges. He has given many one-man shows throughout California.

Pottery classes slated

A class in ceramics for children and another for teenagers and adults will be offered by the Claremont recreation division.

The instructor for both classes will be David Firman of Claremont, a master of fine arts candidate at Claremont Graduate School and an art graduate of La Verne College.

Hand sculpture for youngsters will meet at the Memorial Park ceramics studio from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Wednesdays starting next week. Additional classes will be held at the same time through June 8. The fee for the seven-week course is $18, plus $3.50 laboratory fee, which includes clay, glazes and the firing.

The teenage and adult class in ceramic wheel and handbuilding will be held on Tuesdays (7:30 to 9:30 p.m.) and Wednesdays (9 to 11 a.m.) for seven weeks starting Tuesday. Additional classes will be held March 1 to April 20 and April 26 to June 8.

Fatal dream

Early in April 1865 President Lincoln told his wife and a friend that he had dreamed he was awakened by sobbing and followed the sound to the East Room of the White House. There he found mourners surrounding a catafalque and an honor guard told him: "The President . . . killed by an assassin." Within two weeks the slain President lay in the room.

White House transition: Trauma of losing power, men for all seasons find they are out of season

By SAUL PETT
Ap Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elliot Richardson, a man for all seasons who is out of season, has a playful idea.

It is to collect the brightest people about to lose their jobs in the federal government and form a small counterpart of the executive branch on the outside.

"We would hire ourselves out as professional opponents of whatever the new administration does. Anything they are for we are the experts in being against. We'd provide the analysis, develop the action recommendations, design the campaigns for public support, draft the bills for Congress. You could make millions that way, don't you think?

"If the administration drives up the price of mushrooms with a tariff on foreign mushrooms which are more cheaply produced, we're automatically for the mushroom eaters. If the President offers an energy contingency plan which in a crisis called for curtailment of weekend travel, the tourist industry would know automatically they could come to us and we'd develop the reasons why this is a terrible idea. If ..."

The outgoing Secretary of Commerce, who holds so many ex-titles he lives in fear of being introduced one day as the former Elliot Richardson, was, of course, making a joke about his future plans. But the area of his humor reflects a question occupying the minds of many of the nation's leaders who are now 11 days away from being stripped of all rank and almost all privileges:

How are you going to keep 'em down on the farm or up in the board room after they have seen the Great Inside, the center of the action and the power and the sometime glory, the perks and the pressure cookers at the highest levels of the federal establishment?

It is a problem of adjustment facing Gerald Ford because he has been President and won't be again; Elliot Richardson because he has been almost everything else in the executive branch but President; Henry Kissinger because he has lived and labored at the core of world peace or war for eight intense years. A problem of adjustment for the many others far removed from Armageddon but still in the thrall of the consuming challenge, the long, long hours, the heady excitement of trying to make a government of 215 million people work. Good, bad or indifferent, they tried and they will miss it.

"I can imagine," says Richardson now in a serious vein, "Feeling a sense of deprivation from not being a part of things I'll be reading about in the papers. A feeling that when I get up in the morning there isn't really anything very much facing me that day, no need to master the essence of a problem as soon as possible, no way to use accumulated experience, a sense of how to resolve problems, how to move things from here to there, how to elicit consensus and cooperation.

"It's like race horses no longer brought to the track. They probably are quite comfortable in their pastures. But it's different, very different."

A man leaving a high-powered executive job in private business may also go through a form of the bends, but re-entry from government has a special quality. You are no longer doing the people's business which, like virtue, apparently has its own rewards — a sense of purity, real or rationalized, in being able to tell yourself you are not working for personal profit but for the public good.

RE-ENTRY — The re-entry from government into outside life is "like racehorses no longer brougnt to the track" says Elliot Richardson, shown at an informal moment in his Washington office, when he was attorney general.

Trauma of losing power

Some men steal, many feed their egos and political dreams at the public trough but, despite Watergate, there is still reason to believe that the majority of major bureaucrats put up with the long hours, the relatively short pay, the public cynicism and occasional uproars because they savor this sense of dedication.

"In 25 years I've worked for great men and I've worked for bastards," said a man now cleaning out his desk in the upper reaches of the State Department. "But here, at least, you have the illusion that every piece of paper that comes across involves the public interest. And that sustains you."

Presidents may not be any more dedicated than the thousands of faceless bureaucrats who work for them, but in leaving they face a downhill slope that is longer and steeper.

In adjusting to private citizenry, Gerald Ford has at least this going for him: Before he got it, he never lusted for the job. He was in it only two and a half years and, all hands seem to agree, never became addicted to power. Even in its small uses. Orders were more often questions than orders.

"Bob," he'd say to his military aide, Maj. Robert Barrett, "do you suppose we can use a helicopter on this trip and save the long car ride?"

"Mr. President," Barrett said on more than one occasion, "you're President. You can do anything you want."

But going into retirement he will not have that comforting annuity enjoyed by every man who went before him, the knowledge that once there was a time when a majority of his countrymen voted to make him their leader. Even Richard Nixon has that to cling to.

Gerald Ford never wanted the job but having gotten it he wanted to keep it by public reaffirmation, election. He thought he had earned the right to enter history with more than the unique title of "caretaker President."

"He thought he had done a good job here," said a man a few steps from the Oval Office. "He wanted to keep doing it because he thought he was right. He especially thought he had led a spiritual revival in the country. He genuinely identified himself with that great feeling we all had July 4. And that, more than anything, explains that look of deep hurt in his eyes on Nov. 3 and some of the days that followed."

"None of us who hasn't experienced it," said Ron Nessen, the President's press secretary, "can even come close to understanding that feeling. You work hard, you campaign hard. On Nov. 2, you seek the ultimate judgment of your peers, 215 million people, and it comes back, thumbs down."

While no one around gregarious, outgoing Gerald Ford expects him to become a brooding Hamlet in retirement, it is agreed he will have his problems. For 28 years in government, he was accustomed to coming to his desk every morning and working his way down the stack of paper. These mornings the stack is very low. After Jan. 20, it will be all gone.

"Because of his energy level, his relative youthfulness (at 63), his past patterns of work," said Maj. Barrett, who goes into retirement with Ford as chief assistant, "he will have to have a real replacement for what he does now. It cannot be artificial, it will have to have content and real challenge."

Accordingly, at Ford's behest, Barrett has been studying the ways in which other Presidents spent their days after the White House. All of them kept busy, but something was missing.

It feels, William Howard Taft once said, "like a giant locomotive suddenly pulling a toy train." The momentum remains. The payload is gone.

To bridge the gap from real power to no power, Lyndon Baines Johnson, that one-man cannonballing express, threw himself with characteristic fury into his memoirs, a series of TV interviews, organizing the Johnson Library and the Johnson School of Public Affairs and running his ranch. Especially his ranch.

"He ran his cows the way he once ran the country," said his old friend, James Rowe. "All out."

The tractors and the pickup trucks were equipped with two-way radios and all hands were well advised to keep in close touch with the commander in chief. Where once he studied status reports on bills before Congress, he now read, with care, about the egg production of his 200 chickens. The body count in Vietnam was replaced by the latest attendance figures at his birthplace and his library.

And, writer Doris Kearns tells us, once during a dry spell when a water pump failed and new parts were urgently needed, Johnson personally tracked down the manufacturer in Cincinnati by phone. He finally was assured the parts shipment was being expedited. Like a President thanking an allied Prime Minister for the promise of two air squadrons, Johnson thanked the parts man "for your help and support at this critical time."

His transition into private life was helped by his successor, Richard Nixon, according to Tom Johnson, who was the late President's administrative assistant in retirement and is now publisher of the Dallas Times Herald.

"Nixon treated him with enormous respect," Tom Johnson recalled. "Every Friday a Jetstar would land at the ranch with intelligence information. He was also advised in advance of major events. In fact, a day or two before he died, he was told that a peace agreement with Hanoi was about to be announced."

Like Lyndon Johnson, Dwight Eisenhower was long accustomed to power and the center of the action when his turn came to ride down Pennsylvania Avenue with the new man. Retiring to his farm in Gettysburg, he still retained his deep interest in national affairs while having no power to do anything about them.

He sublimated, especially in his first year out of office. When he read of a new national problem, he'd get on the phone and call various people, especially former members of his cabinet. He'd ask what they would do if they were still in a position to do anything about anything. And that was it, a meeting of a shadow cabinet by phone, poker for matchsticks.

Among recent Presidents, Harry Truman seemed to have the least

More valley residents tapped for trip to inauguration

9 persons get invitations to capital rites

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

Nine more valley residents have reported that they, too, have received invitations to the Presidential inauguration in Washington, D.C., on Jan. 20.

They are Ann Hughes, 75, 4146 E. Ninth St., Pomona; Jeri Wofford, 62, Pomona; Violet Sellers, 62, 532 Chester Place, Pomona; Dorothy Goldsmith, La Verne; Ruben and Dolores Gonzales, La Verne; Bob Hutton, 30, 1325 N. College Ave., Claremont; Katie Bendix, 82, San Dimas; and Mila Tiefenbach, 4563 Bird Farm Road, Chino.

Four plan to attend, one said she would attend if she could share travel and lodging expenses and four said they would not attend.

Names of four persons who had received invitations to the inauguration were reported in an earlier story.

Mrs. Hughes said she watched the Carter-Ford debates then wrote Carter: "You won out. I was with you all the way." She will give her invitation to her grandson, Keith Hughes, 19, Upland.

Mrs. Wofford, a real estate sales woman, said she worked for Carter throughout the campaign and when she arrives in Washington, expects to be assigned to a committee. "My suitcases are packed," she said.

Mrs. Sellers spent her summer vacation in Plains, Ga., visiting relatives. She went to the Carter home, she said, but was stopped by Secret Service men on the walk. She wrote and requested an invitation to the inauguration.

"I'd like to go, but I can't afford the $900 it costs for travel and lodgings. I'd go if I could find someone who would share expenses with me," she said.

Mrs. Goldsmith, library multi-media specialist at Marshall Junior High School in Pomona, worked in the Carter campaign, and attended the Democratic convention in New York City. "I'm very excited. This is the historical event of the year," she said."I'm going to do a lot of filming to share with my colleagues and by students."

Ruben and Dolores Gonzales "went into the Carter campaign way back when people were saying, Jimmy who? We were staunch supporters,"said Mrs. Gonzales. "He was such a fresh change and we are very happy with the results of the election."

They will visit Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-25th Dist., an old friend of theirs. Mrs. Gonzales said reservations are "impossible" now any closer than Baltimore or Virginia.

Hutton, technical supervisor at the Progress Bulletin, said he sent a small contribution to Carter very early in the campaign, "before he was known," and later on, answered a questionnaire Carter sent out.

"I doubt that I'll go," he said. "I just got back from vacation and I don't want to go anywhere right now."

Mrs. Bendix received her invitation on Dec. 31, her 82nd birthday.

She has arthritis and will not attend.

She said she cut an article out of the Progress Bulletin entitled "I Am a Sick American" and sent a copy to Carter. "I thought he would like to read it, too," she said. "I didn't expect an invitation to the inauguration."

Mrs. Tiefenbach, who will not attend, worked to elect Carter then wrote him that his mother was first and he was second because his mother had gone to India in the Peace Corps.

Rescue team—they come from all walks of life

Progress Bulletin
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, January 9, 1977

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

They come from all walks of life. The group includes a bank manager, steel worker, professional painter and a police officer.

Twelve months a year, seven days a week, 24 hours a day, they are willing to risk their lives so that another's might be saved.

A car drives off a 300-foot cliff at Mt. Baldy. A 2-year-old child is lost in the San Gabriel Mountains. Four hikers are caught in a blizzard, their whereabouts unknown.

In such situations, the San Dimas Mountain Rescue Team will be there to find, rescue and save endangered lives.

For the risks that team members take, the time they spend and the inconveniences suffered, each is paid a total sum of $1 per year.

Why do they do it?

"It's exciting," said one member.

"It gives me a chance to get outdoors," said another.

"I think it's the thrill plus the knowledge that you're doing something to help other people," added a third team member.

Sgt. C. N. McGraw of the San Dimas sheriff's station, who coordinates activities between the rescue team and Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, has another view.

"These guys have a lot of dedication and character to do the job they do. They save a lot of lives, and yet they don't ask for pay or recognition.

"They go out on rescue missions that sometimes last for days at a time, in freezing weather and away from their families and jobs. They are truly selfless men."

Despite the low pay, the inconveniences and the frustrations of an occasional unsuccessful rescue mission, getting on the rescue team is not easy.

Only the most qualified of the many who apply are ever accepted for rescue training.

"We are very selective of who we choose," said Brian Frances, the group's spokesman. "An applicant must have an impeccable police record, pass high physical fitness standards, and undergo rigorous training to get on the team."

Each member is required to take training in first aid, hiking and camping skills, plus mountain rescue methods.

In addition, all are trained as reserve deputy sheriffs and, as such, have the powers of arrest. They are permitted to carry weapons. Members attend nine-week training courses at the sheriff's academy where they receive instructions in police skills.

"The San Gabriel Mountains have the highest crime rate of any national forest," said Frances. "We have had to deal with such crimes as murders, muggings, rapes and drug violations up here."

Unknown to many is the fact the San Dimas rescue team is a private, non-profit corporation. Since its inception in 1955, it has had to depend on private donations to keep in operation.

"We get a lot of help from the San Dimas sheriff's station," said Frances. "The station lends us the use of vehicles, helicopters, ropes and hardware and also provides us with winter clothing and first aid equipment.

"But even with that, we could still use money," said Frances.

Each rescue team member spends an average of $400 of his own money for personal rescue equipment, he added.

"At a dollar a year, you can see it would take a while to recover that much money," he joked.

Mountain rescuers have three basic rescues: cliff-hangers, car-overs and searches.

A cliff-hanger occurs when a person gets stuck on the side of a mountain or cliff and can't go up or down. Rescuers are lowered to the stranded victims by ropes. The stranded persons may then be lowered or hoisted from their perch.

"These types of rescues are sometimes quite spectacular," said Frances. "They are particularly dangerous due to the chance of rock slides."

When an automobile drives off a cliff in the mountains, rescuers refer to the incident as a "car-over."

"In a car-over, the victims usually require extensive medical care if they have not already died," said Frances.

"Sometimes car-overs aren't discovered for long periods of time. If that's the case, there isn't much hope of finding any survivors."

Searches, however, are the operations that take the time.

"During a search, we can often be in the backwoods for days at a time," said Frances. "It is usually a very slow and painstaking operation. All you can do is take it one step at a time.

"Searches take a tremendous amount of skill to conduct. These mountains are some of the most rugged in the world and when people get lost, they can really get lost.

"We had one search that lasted eight days before we found our guy," he added.

Frances said rescuers will never stop searching for lost persons until the victim is found or there is absolutely no hope left.

So what can a person do to avoid getting lost in the first place?

"Use extreme caution anytime you go to the mountains," warned Frances. "Wear warm woolen clothes, not cotton, no matter what the weather looks like."

"Always take more clothing and supplies than you think you will need. You never know what might happen.

"Finally, if you get lost or stuck somewhere, stay where you are. It is easier to find someone who stays in one place than to track someone who is moving around."

New rules to battle graffiti

An ordinance that would prohibit the sale of spray paint cans to minors in the city will be considered for adoption Monday night by the Pomona City Council.

The ordinance is identical to one enacted previously by the cities of San Dimas and Azusa.

In addition to prohibiting the sale of spray paint cans to minors, the ordinance would also make it illegal for persons under 18 years of age to have a spray paint can in their possession from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.

The ordinance is designed to cut down on graffitti.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include a proposed $5,500 study of market potential for the proposed South Reservoir Street industrial redevelopment project area.

The council will also consider a recommendation that the first council meeting of each month be designated a study session.

Air pollution control

District seeks independence

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Southern California Air Pollution Control District took the first steps toward removing itself from support by county property taxes this week as the SCAPCD Board of Directors adopted two measures to change the district's funding structure.

Meeting in the West Covina City Hall, the board adopted unanimously items which will provide for funding from air pollution control permit fees and renewal of those fees as well as action to propose legislation adding a $1 charge for motor vehicle registration of cars in the South Coast Air Basin.

Supervisor Laurence Schmit of Orange County reported to the board on a meeting on developing ways of alternative funding held Thursday at the APCD El Monte headquarters. Schmit said that three alternative funding sources had been discussed: utility taxes, motor vehicle registrations and permit fees.

The final recommendation coming out of the meeting, said Schmit, was that the district fund 55 per cent of its program from motor vehicle registration fees and 45 per cent of its income from air pollution permit fees which would be renewed annually.

Schmit said some disagreement over the motor vehicle fees being used to support SCAPCD had arisen at the meeting because SCAPCD has no authority to charge fees to mobile polluters; only stationary polluters.

Part of the action taken by the board on Friday was to have legislation introduced in Sacramento to grant SCAPCD authority to charge fees to mobile polluters through the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Schmit said, "The plan aims toward elimination of county sources of revenue as a means of supporting the district."

A $1 charge on registration fees, he said, could raise $5 million annually for the district. In some counties, he said, it could mean a two or three cent reduction in the tax rate when combined with funds from permit fees.

Los Angeles County Supervisor Ed Edelman said, "I'm in total agreement that we have to move away from county tax support of the district. I think the automobile and the automobile driver should help pay for the maintenance of the air they help pollute."

The board also approved permit fees to be paid by stationary polluters. Deputy Air Pollution Control Officer Eric Lemke told the board that the revised permit fees which he presented would raise $2.2 million their first year including $600,000 in initial permanent fees, $1.4 million in annual renewals and $200,000 from gas stations in annual renewals.

Initial fees charged to stationary polluters would be higher than the renewal fees. Lemke said he felt the proposed arrangement combines the best of the permanent fee structures found in Los Angeles and Orange Counties with the best renewal fee structure from San Bernardino County.

The average laundry would pay a $100 permanent fee, said Lemke, while a dry cleaner would pay a $30 renewal fee. The Edison Co., said Lemke, might pay $68,000 a year in renewal fees, but fees at Kaiser Steel in Fontana would be reduced under the new fee structure from the present $57,000 per year to $38,000 per year.

Marksmen earn record scores

The rifle team broke the national record for police divisions, scoring 1,926 points out of a possible 2,000 in a match held at Camp Pendleton.

The pistol team placed first in both the Stockton State Championship held recently and in the sheriff's department's first annual California Combat Association Practical Police Championship in November.

Dryland ski classes set

Class openings are still available in the Pomona and Park and Recreation Department's dryland ski school, which will meet the next three Monday nights at Ganesha Park in Pomona.

The class, held from 7 to 9:30 p.m., is led by Dick Morris, professional ski school director. Cost is $7 for the three meetings.

Students must supply their own skis, boots and poles. A plastic ramp is used to teach students a variety of techniques.

Films and information about equipment, safety and ski trips are provided. Films will also be shown.

Family rates are available and graduates will be invited to the mountains for a group lesson.

Limited wars can't be won

Like President Ford's policy-makers, the men Mr. Carter has chosen for foreign affairs and defense, almost without exception, were schooled in a concept dominant since World War II: Wars are not winnable.

This belief led to our experiment with limited wars in Korea and in South Vietnam — to collapse in Saigon and to continued dangerous uncertain bubbling on the Korean penninsula.

Even more seriously, this policy has dominated our strategic defense buildup. That is, it has led to the concept that our arms have one aim and one aim only — the prevention of war. Our thinking is based on the belief that nuclear war, once it starts, is not only unwinnable, but unthinkable.

Anyone in his right mind must agree that prevention of war must be our paramount aim. But once we add the belief that a nuclear conflict is unwinnable, and so tailor our forces, we invite war.

If our forces are not designed for victory — only to threaten destruction — and if the opponent's are designed for winning regardless of the destruction involved, this is an open invitation to a power-minded totalitarian state.

There's another basic flaw in our logic. We assume that whoever is running Russia at any particular moment will be moved by the same reasoning and worries we face. And by the same concern over loss of life and property.

We have, therefore assumed that if this country has a nuclear force large enough to withstand a Soviet first strike and retaliate, destroying a significant percentage of the Soviet population and Soviet industry, the Kremlin will back away from war.

Our planners as a result are greatly influenced by reports the mass-evacuationcivildefense programs of the Soviet Union are largely paper plans, unlikely to be workable in an emergency.

We submit that this is false logic. Vietnamese Communist leader Ho Chi Minh demonstrated in the war against the French, in the political and economic programs he fostered and in the fighting against the South Vietnamese and ourselves that he would risk any loss of life and of property if necessary to achieve his aims.

History teaches us also that the Soviet Union does not regard the lives of ordinary citizens as democracies do. To achieve economic objectives, they have allowed millions to starve. To achieve political goals, they have eliminated or imprisoned virtually for life untold numbers of their citizenry.

What our planners ignore in their comforting reports on the ineffectiveness of Soviet mass evacuation programs, is that these same plans call for thorough protection for selected officials, essential production workers and for key military defense personnel.

The data suggests, in fact, that the Soviet Union could survive a nuclear war with sizable powers of recuperation though with a decimated population.

This is not to suggest Leonid Brezhnev and his associates are planning a nuclear war. They have, to date, shown great caution. It is more likely they will use their new strength as an umbrella to give them more leeway in Africa, the Middle East, Asia and Latin America — believing that we will not stand firm if the odds are clearly against our own survival in a showdown.

But in a totalitarian system it is impossible to foresee who will rule next year, or 10 years down the pike.

In sum, we don't know what the eventual Russian goal is. But we do know that at present they're building more than they require for purely defensive purposes.

Think on these things

This is a good day — filled with the good things that I can put in it. It is my container for happiness, my hours filled with warmth — like the fragrance of my garden or the savory smells of the kitchen.

This is an especially good day because I can think good thoughts, say something worth hearing and send out some vibrations that's sure to reach a kindred soul.

This is a lovely day — because you're in it. Though I may not see you nor hear you — I sense that you are there and I feel the influence of your love and kindness. So if there are other things not in keeping with this good day, they will simply have to wait — forever — because I plan to have another good day tomorrow and tomorrow.

"The wind has a language I wish I could learn . . . sometimes it is soothing and sometimes 'tis stern . . . sometimes it comes like a low sweet song . . . and all things grow calm as the sound floats along."

The poet, L.E. Landon often wrote in an effort to identify with nature — to feel the powerful connection that we so often ignore. And we know that life blows hot and cold, strong and yet sometimes only a breeze. The gusts get pretty powerful at times and we have to lean into the pressure in order to hold our own. Yet, it brings good, too. The wind changes and there's a period of balmy, mellow breezes that let us rest. But it is in the strong winds that we exert our greatest strengths.

Smoking and cancer

Dear Editor:

In the Progress Bulletin Oct. 12, there was an article together with a photograph of me with the heading of "Pomona Physician Honored by American Cancer Society." The article related a number of details concerning activities of the American Cancer Society's Northeast Los Angeles County Unit which includes Pomona Valley. A number of persons including myself received certificates of merit in recognition for the work done in the Cancer Society's program. Several of my friends sent me copies of the article from the newspaper and offered their congratulations for my modest contribution.

One of my friends, however, was more observant than the others. Adjacent to the above article and occupying much of the same page was an advertisement for Kent cigarettes. Apparently the new "Kent Golden Lights Menthol" are the lowest in tar of six other brands mentioned in the advertisement. And it is interesting to note that this is "as low as you can go and still get good taste and smoking satisfaction." There is also a note indicating that some cigarettes contain only 2 mg. of tar, which is much lower than the 8 mg. of tar in Kents. But apparently the former do not have a good taste nor provide smoking satisfaction. Oh yes, there is also the usual warning: THE SURGEON GENERAL HAS DETERMINED THAT CIGARETTE SMOKING IS DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH.

It seems to me that this is a very important example of power of advertising to influence human behavior and health habits. If the ad sells cigarettes, that is the only important objective. Let the buyer beware and risk developing "cigarette disease" in one or more of its many forms including chronic lung disease, lung cancer, arterial disease, acute coronary occlusion and sudden death, and a host of other related problems. Also, let those who are exposed to harmful gases from a burning cigarette in a closed room or poorly ventilated workshop or office accept without complaint the pollution of the air they breathe.

The sad part of it is that the tobacco smoking-related diseases will inevitably develop in the young people who are smoking in increasing numbers. And as they age their health will suffer and many will become disabled or die. The Cancer Society and its army of volunteer workers are dedicated to the proposition that through education, legislation, and example, the health habits of the nation can be modified before damage becomes irreversible.

I thank you for your support but would suggest that you consider reduction or elimination, if possible, of the newspaper space devoted to cigarette advertising.

Churchman's dubious deals

WASHINGTON — The million members of the Assemblies of God believe in the old-time religion, with stern emphasis on Biblical integrity. Most are solid, middle class people who, in a corrupt and changing society, have held stubbornly to their fundamentalist faith.

But a few weeks ago, a church official sent us a signed statement supported by several prominent laymen. It urged us to investigate the financial dealings of their shepherd, the charismatic Thomas Zimmerman. He not only is general superintendent of the Assemblies of God but head of the 50-million-member World Pentecostal Conference.

We can now report that the suspicions of his dissident followers have some basis. The Reverend Zimmerman, a dynamic man of 64, has kept hundreds of thousands of dollars of church funds in a bank that he heads.

At the same time, he has joined other church leaders in purchasing 100 acres of land across from a proposed shopping center, which his bank helped to finance. Three church leaders are acquiring the 100 acres for about $155,000. When the center is completed, their land may be worth up to $800,000.

Zimmerman told us at first that he had no interest in the shopping center. Yet the contract to buy the 100 acres across from the mall is signed by Zimmerman and two of his church associates, Donald Shelton and Milton McCorcle.

The suave Shelton, who heads the church's stewardship department, has also purchased more than $600,000 worth of acreage for the shopping center on behalf of the developers.

The land records show that these purchases were financed by Zimmerman's bank, the Empire Bank of Springfield, Mo. Both the shopping mall and the church headquarters are also located in Springfield.

Zimmerman has held a stockholder's interest in the bank as high as $160,000. He now owns $110,000 worth of Empire stock, according to the latest available records. He is chairman of the board and draws $150 every time he attends a board meeting.

Four other top church officials are listed as major stockholders in the bank, with holdings that range from $80,000 to $160,000. For example, the president of the church-owned Evangel College, Robert Spence, is a stockholder. Shelton also owns $80,000 worth of stock, although he was not a shareholder at the time of his land acquisition.

The financial conflicts, we found, disturbed Andrew Melli, the respected vice pesident of Carnation International, who is also a financial committeeman for the Assemblies of God. He questioned the heavy church deposits in Zimmerman's bank.

The reverend quickly moved some of the funds to other banks. But we have learned that $140,000 in church trust funds were still deposited in the Empire Bank as of December 30. The bank, of course, earns money on its deposits.

Both Zimmerman and Shelton spoke with us at length. They stoutly defended themselves and one another. They insisted that not one penny of the church's moeny had gone into the land deals and that audits had shown no mismanagement of their stewardship of the church's shopping center to buy the land because they had promised a gift to the church and because it gave him an "inside track" on his own land deal. Zimmerman swore that he had nothing to do with the loans that financed the purchases.

Yet land records reveal two promissory notes, totaling $688,540, which were executed on Dec. 13, 1973, by the developers to the bank. The notes are attached to documents showing that Shelton was instrumental in assembling the land for the proposed shopping center. All the deals were consumated at a time that Shelton's boss, the Reverend Zimmerman, was the active chairman of the bank.

Sources familiar with the development complained to us that the church leaders misled them. Real estate sources in Springfield, for example, said that Shelton gave them the impression he was arranging the land purchases on behalf of the church.

The former chief executive of the Empire Bank, Estyl Sparkman, now of Fort Smith, Ark., also told us Zimmerman had falsely assured him that he had no interest whatsoever in the shopping center development.

Zimmerman told us he has no recollection of the conversation. "My life is in the hands of the Lord," he said.

Footnote: Since its initial financing of the shopping center project, Empire Bank has been inactive in the deal. Meanwhile, we have learned that the Internal Revenue Service is quietly looking into the finances of Zimmerman and Shelton.

You'll drink to this!

Americans — your water is purer than it was.

If we've not done or undone everything possible to improve our environment, the quality of our nation's water — in lakes, streams and reservoirs — is measurably, clearer and cleaner than five years ago.

Let's drink to that!

One of the reasons we get a lopsidedly pessimistic picture of pollution is that the scaremongers can talk in alarming generalities — using words like "poison" and "toxic" and "harmful" — while the scientists are restrained by the ethics of specifics.

A quick for-instance, and I'm quoting from an official report by the United States Geological Survey, Department of Interior:

"Water collected at hydrologic bench-mark stations, analyzed for the following: arsenic, barium, cadmium, chromium, cobalt, copper, lead, mercury, selenium, silver and zinc — 642 separate analyses — revealed 65 percent of the observed metal concentrations were zero."

Now, in shirt-sleeve English what that says is significant and exciting.

At the 57 places in 37 states where we are keeping a continuing watch on the water, the quality is good and improving.

And the Great Lakes . . .

Here again let's reduce official reports of our Environmental Protection Agency to less technical language.

The sparkle and the freshness are returning to the Great Lakes.

Once dead Lake Erie has come back to life.

We took more edible fish out of Lake Erie last year than out of larger Lake Superior. This depollution of the largest reservoir of fresh water in the world is one of the greatest success stories in American history.

Just 10 years ago hundreds of beaches were closed as raw sewage and industrial oils washed up onto the sand. The lakes were choked with explosive growths of aquatic plants near the shores.

Fish, literally, were suffocating as their oxygen supply dwindled.

But during the summer of '76 swimming beaches unusable for thirty years were reopened.

The highly prized lake trout and walleye have made dramatic comebacks in the western lakes; sport fishing again is a passion for lake residents and vacationers.

Most places on the Mississippi River you can drink without danger — a few decades ago you'd have got typhoid.

If we haven't done everything right, we've done some things right. Let's drink to that!

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

It looks as though President-elect Carter is finding it a bit difficult to figure out how he can make a $5 billion defense cut.

But why sorry? After all, it is perfectly possible to keep our defense and maintain our defense spending too. If $5 billion is all that is necessary to accomplish this, why not point a finger at the cat and dog owners of America who are spending $17 billion annually on their pets?

By forcing them to cut their expenditures by less than one third and turning those savings over to national defense, the country would be saved by the dog and cat owning patriots who wouldn't be out a single nickel more than they are now spending.

What's more, because of slightly reduced diets and fewer trips to the pet beauty salons, their dogs and cats would undoubtedly be a lot healthier than they are now.

Pity today's confused juveniles! They listen to their parents lecture them on morality and, as a result, are more perplexed than ever. Their problem is that they haven't yet become thoroughly conversant with the language of adulthood in which, all too often, the words are much the same but their meanings strangely different.

"Why," one puzzled youngster wants to know, "is it OK for kids to watch a 'G' movie and yet be told a G-string is a no-no?"

Changes in bar exam

By EARL G. WATERS

No sooner had the California Committee of Bar Examiners disclosed plans for possible changes in its examination which determines whether law students will be permitted to practice the profession than it was bombarded from several directions.

Assemblyman Alister McAlister, an attorney, blasted the proposed changes in a manner indicating he wants no alterations. He contended there are "too many incompetent and unethical attorneys" and claimed the committee would be "lowering" standards and giving "licenses to prey upon the public to an increasing number of mediocre lawyers."

His opposition to change not only conflicts with other legislators but apparently with the majority of the Bar Association under whose auspices the study leading to the proposed changes was conducted. Not only have demands been growing for revisions but some law professors are advocating a complete change in the method of teaching which would compel a different examination.

The Assembly Office of Research, which has been studying the bar examination process at the request of Assemblyman Willie Brown, issued a preliminary finding that there is a lack of standards for grading essay questions which results in inequities. It is true that while the essay questions are given under controlled circumstances the grading is not done under similar control. Consultant James Billbury contends the grading, admittedly subjective, is done by persons "with no professional background in testing" and the grades depend upon the readers some of whom "are harsh, some lenient, some fast and some slow." Rebutting the contention that the readers get better with experience, he said many admitted "they get bored after a while and tend to rush."

The challenge of the professors was voiced by Dean C. Boyack of Southwestern University School of Law who criticized the 100 year old case law method of teaching declaring "even in scholastic depth, it falls short not only because the cases present a pre-chosen solution but because it fails to consider what lies beyond a simple ascertainment of legal rights.

Regardless of the heat, it appears the committee is determined to bring about some changes designed to improve the examination process. Where once the entire examination was one of essays, in 1972 it was changed to substitute multiple choice questions for part of the test. The committee not only recommended continued use of the multiple choice section but increasing its weight in the results and reducing the number of essay questions as well as extending the time for answering them thus easing the pressure on examinees.

The committee also proposed that those failing but passing one section not be required to retake the successful portion in a re-examination. It also suggests examples of successful essay answers be published for the benefit of applicants in future examinations.

The proposals evidence a concern with the examination process and a desire to improve it. Perhaps with more study the committee can find a way to give parts of the examination prior to graduation and avoid the heavy pressure of the current three-day exam. Perhaps also it can figure out how to shorten the time between the taking and the learning of the results, currently a lag of about four months which seems an undue hardship on the law school grads.

A disturbing note however was issued by the committee shortly before it announced its proposals. This was the rule banning the use of electric typewriters by test takers. Anyone experienced knows that one accustomed to using an electric machine has great difficulty switching back to a manual. Under the pressure of a test is hardly the time to attempt it. And typed essays benefit the examiners who must read them.

Skinnyitis said new menace

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to report a new public health menace — it is skinnyitis. Victims of this affliction are subject to colds, frequent absences from work and severe emotional problems.

Our firm employs 25 females, 18 of whom suffer from skinnyitis. Their symptoms are easy to recognize. They talk about nothing but diets, measurements and how much they weigh. Their sole aim in life is to weigh what they did when they were in the 7th grade.

The mainstay of the victim's diet is black coffee, clear broth, diet pop and cigarettes. Of course, these individuals cannot get a decent night's sleep and are dead tired during the day.

Too bad the women in this country don't realize how important it is to keep physically fit. In order to enjoy good health they must give the body what it needs — and this means adequate nourishment. Where did the skin and bones mania come from, anyway? — Mother Of Nine Who Weighs 117 lbs.

Dear Mother: The notion that Skiny Is Beautiful came from the fashion magazines. The models with their sunken eyes, hollow cheeks and protruding hip bones do indeed appear to be undernourished. It's unfortunate that so many women want to look like them.

Another hazard brought on by the craze to be skinny: A cascade of diet books — each phonier than the last. I hope one day soon America will stop worshipping at the feet of the beanpole.

Dear Ann Landers: I was very disappointed in your advice to the woman who signed herself "Hairy Problem." You said if a wife doesn't like her husband in a mustache he should shave it off. This is interfering with his civil liberties, isn't it? After all, it's HIS face and if he likes a mustache nobody has the right to give him any static.

I love my husband's mustache. In fact, it tickles me to death. Ha, ha, ha. I'll bet you'll never print this. — Las Vegas Lil

Dear Lil: Well ho, ho, ho. You lose. Civil liberties are not an issue here. The man's wife simply stated her preference. If she gives him the brush because he refuses to get rid of his mustache, he should not complain about the consequence — which is no lovin'.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's parents put him through four years of college. Now Rod wants to get a Ph. D. in a special field of study.

Problem: His father refuses to pay for any more schooling. He points out that Rod's two younger brothers will be ready for college within three years and the price of education has skyrocketed.

My parents both work and make a good living but they are not rich. Rod feels THEY should put him through these last two years. They have told him they can't do it. Now he is mad at both his parents and mine. Is he justified? — In The Middle

Dear Middle: Parents do not owe their children a college education and neither do in-laws. If they can afford it and are agreeable — fine, but it's not a moral obligation.

Thousands of students take out loans, obtain scholarships, work part-time and put themselves through. If Rod wants his Ph. D. badly enough he will figure out a way to get it. (P.S. It will mean a lot more to him if he makes it on his own.)

Chives satisfy cat's cravings

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our two fiendish Siamese Sealpoints, because you say so, are not allowed out. I have an extensive herb garden and have found the secret to satisfying the craving of these two demons for something green: chives! They'll eat chives with the same gusto a human child eats ice cream. It works charms and keeps the peace, usually. I thought that other readers might try this with their demons. Being but perfumed chlorophyll, it must be good for them. It gives their breath an odor reminiscent of a good French bistro. — G.K.

DEAR G.K.: That's not bad.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I received a shocking letter. It was from the woman who gave me Sunny several months ago. She was a year-old Beagle when I got her. I think the woman waited to be sure I loved her too much to give her up before writing me. Here's what she said: Sunny's mother and grandmother and some other dog in the family all died of cancer and she's warning me to keep close track of Sunny, too. What a shock! Now I have to know the best things to do to prevent cancer in my sweet little dog. I'm already oriented to cancer-causing substances in food, don't eat any myself, and wouldn't knowingly feed any of them to Sunny. Are there any other things to do in relation to nutrition that might help her? What about in any other areas? What could you suggest? — G.K.

DEAR G.K.: Dietary factors which reduce susceptibility to cancer may range from a change in the proportion of trace minerals within the body to higher-than-normal doses of vitamins, A and C in particular, to simple restrictions of the total caloric intake. Severe dietary and caloric restriction appears to increase the immune response to cancer cells within the body and can, in mice, completely prevent cancer in highly susceptible individuals. A non-nutritional survival technique regarding cancer would be an ovariohysterectomy — spaying Sunny — to reduce hormonal cancer cell stimulation and frequent checkups by her doctor to be on the watch for any early signs. A major problem, perhaps, where Sunny's long-term health is concerned, would be that you might go beyond prudent preventative medicine and fall victim to claims concerning cancer prevention which have no scientific basis. It would be easy, too, to slip Sunny into a state of hypochondria as a result of all this.

What people say

"The possible subversion of our government by another government is so blatant. I'm not hinting that the Congress has been subverted. If they are investigating 22 members and can prove anything on five, that isn't much of a subversion. But, obviously, this is a very unhealthy thing, and that's what is terrifying."

— Rep. Richard Bolling (D) of Missouri reacting to reports that at least 22 present and former congressmen are under investigation for allegedly taking gifts from Korean businessman Park Tong-sun.

Volleyball ahead of shower

Do you ever get the feeling that life is a parade and you're standing behind Bill Russell?

While I was watching television the other night, a commercial came on about a shower nozzle that massaged your entire body with four different sprays. The bathee twisted and squealed with such delight that I sat forward in my chair to see what was turning her on.

Finally, she flipped her head and whispered huskily, "Have a GOOD time with your water spray."

I shrugged and figured here was a woman who could make a party out of a tax audit and forgot it.

During the next break, a commercial came on of a man so beat I thought he was going to expire before my eyes. All he wanted out of life was a decent burial. Then he stepped into the shower and began to cover himself with lather. Within seconds, his entire body sprang to life. The last glimpse showed him sniffing his soap in pure ecstasy, and yelling to his wife to get his bowling ball out of the closet.

After that I began to watch the bath commercials closely. They were all the same. Everyone had such a swell time I felt guilty watching them. One woman who looked like a walking ad for sweat, eased herself into a tub of suds and immediately turned into a sex kitten. She snuggled down under the bubbles, closed her eyes and purred, and invited everyone to join her.

What really sent me to the plumbing supply was a commercial for a water spray filmed at a resort in Florida. A hidden camera and microphone recorded the rapture felt by the people who stood under the assault of water. (The last time I saw that look on anyone's face, it was worn by my mother at my wedding.)

Maybe that's what was missing in my life. I had tried raucous parties, jet travel, and baking from scratch. Maybe all I needed to create some excitement was a shower spray to sweep me off my feet.

It took 45 minutes for my son to relinquish the bathroom to me. The steam opened up pores that had been closed for repairs. Turning on the spigot caused the shower to drench my head in water as he had forgotten to push down the plunger. The soap was in a liquid form in the soap dish. A bottle of shampoo without a lid spilled onto my feet. The spray was at eye level and knocked me into a wall. I don't think showers will ever replace volleyball.

Dr. Lamb

Low pressure causes fainting

DEAR DR. LAMB — Maybe you can help me with my problem. For the past several years every time I bend over or sit down on the ground or floor and try to get up, everything turns black and my head feels like it is blown out. I have faanted several times, and it seems to be getting worse.

The doctor I went to gave it a name, which I can't remember, but said there wasn't anything one could do to help it except to get up slowly. Do you know something that would help?

DEAR READER — Your doctor probably called it postural or orthostatic hypotension, meaning low blood pressure with standing. There are many causes for fainting, and a good examination is important. Many medicines commonly prescribed can be the cause. This includes some tranquilizers.

Fainting of the type you describe occurs because there is not enough blood pumped to the brain. This is caused by too much blood going to the legs when you stand up so there is not enough left to pump uphill to your brain.

The distribution of the blood is controlled by reflexes that regulate the size of the arteries in your legs and elsewhere. These reflexes can become faulty because of disease in the arteries to the brain centers that control them.

Fainting can also occur because of poor muscle tone that permits too much blood to accumulate rapidly in your leg veins. Bed rest contributes to this problem. Any decrease in the total amount of blood in your body may be a factor. Then you can include pain from any source, even the response to the needle stick from blood-drawing or shots. Psychic influences are also important. Some people get faint from the smells of a hospital or the sight of blood. Low blood sugar and other chemical changes in the body can also be a factor. Fasting may make a person faint and cause the symptoms you describe because of loss of body water and chemical changes.

With this list of things that can cause faintness you see why a complete examination is important in establishing why a person tends to faint.

With recurrent episodes as you describe, it is more important to have a complete evaluation. You may be able to help yourself by wearing support hose or firm elastic stockings. The external pressure against the legs prevents the veins from overdistending when you first stand up. This helps to increase the return of blood to the heart which in turn augments the amount of blood pumped by the heart and the amount going to the brain.

The firmer the external support to the legs, the more protection you will get against fainting. There are special stockings that provide more pressure at the foot level and gradually decrease the pressure at levels nearer the hip. Try external support and see if it doesn't help you. You will still need a complete medical evaluation to nail down the real cause of your problem.

Fainting is a common experience, and it can be very important or of little consequence. To give you more complete information about it — I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-2, Fainting (Syncope). Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

Opening lead — 3 ♠

Here is a Boris Schapiro hand from Bridge Analysis. The game was rubber bridge with everyone playing the weak notrump. Hence, North's notrump opening bid, East's two spade overcall and West's double of three clubs.

The club double was one of the hungry variety, but if the defense started with two spades and a ruff, declarer was sure to be set. However, East was looking for bigger things. He took his king of spades and led back the deuce of diamonds. Declarer went right up with dummy's ace, led the deuce of clubs, stuck in the jack and East was in with the king just as he had expected to be.

Now East cashed the ace of spades and West went into one of those trances that tend to turn their partner's hair white. Finally, West discarded the king of diamonds.

West had come to some silly conclusion that East held the diamond queen and that this play would lead to an extra set since West would get to ruff a diamond.

Greed and particularly senseless greed is a terrible thing. East led the third spade. West ruffed and returned a diamond, whereupon South won, led his 10 of clubs, let it ride and made his doubled contract.

A Tennessee reader wants to know if the revoke penalty can cost the revoking side a trick or tricks taken before the revoke.

The answer is a decided "No." The revoke penalty only applies to the revoking and later tricks. It does not apply to tricks taken previously.

Grant never turned back

A little known fact about Ulysses S. Grant is that he had a phobia which prevented him from ever turning back. That is, if he walked out of a house, he would not turn around to go back into it, even though he might suddenly have realized he'd left something behind he wanted to take with him. If he started across a road only to remember he didn't want to take that direction after all, he went on anyhow. And if he lit a cigar or lifted a glass, neither could he put down untouched by his lips; that would have been unthinkable. This latter matter is not a whimsical allusion to his smoking and drinking habits, but merely another example of the press-on compulsion.

A real estate expert who's made a study of the matter says the average couple in search of a place to live look at eight houses before buying.

The toymakers expect the typical family to spend $85 per year per child for playthings.

PERSONAL ACCOUNT

Q. "Which one of our presidents was it who jotted down in a vest-pocket memo book what he spent every single personal penny for?"

A. That's said to have been one of the wise procedures of old Calvin Coolidge. Have you ever tried that trick? I did once. At the end of the first day, the notations read: "Beef jerky, 30 cents. Gasoline, $6.50. Ballpoint pen, 29 cents, Miscellaneous, $92."

Q. "Where are my 'applause muscles'?"

A. On your inner upper arms. If you clap your hands in a rapid manner, you can feel those muscles shake.

DOWRY LIMIT

A new law in Pakistan limits a bride's dowry to $500 and puts an official lid of $250 on wedding expenses. The legislators who pushed that one through said they were tired of hearing about high demands made by bachelors who were virtually extorting money out of their girlfriends' families. It's not always an easy matter for a young lady in Pakistan to find a husband.

The muscle coordination or lack of same in children is such that they almost invariably learn how to draw horizontal strokes long before they learn how to draw vertical strokes.

I wondered what he did in his early youth. "I did what many of my contemporaries did," he grinned. "I was a soda jerk in a Times Square drugstore, also was a bell-hop in a Times Square hotel. But the job I enjoyed most was being Mike Todd's chauffeur when I was only 15.

Deformed girl finds Yule gift in surgery

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — Ida Hays, who underwent rare and complicated surgery in May to replace her deformed face with a new one, says her Christmas was just "great."

"The operation was my Christmas this year," said the 16-year-old.

Ida said her family gave her mostly clothes as gifts, but she also received stacks of Christmas cards and additional gifts from people throughout the country who first learned of her story from news reports of the operation at New York University Hospital.

Ida's problem was that her eyes were separated by twice the normal width. It was the most severe case of orbital hypertelorism, as it is called, in the experience of the hospital's Institute of Reconstructive Plastic Surgery.

In the 10-hour operation, surgeons removed the deformed bone in her face, moved her eyes more than an inch closer together and filled the resulting gap between her eye sockets and temples with bone taken from her hip. Her brain had to be lifted to make room for the surgeons to work.

The cost of Ida's operation, about $6,000 plus the air fare and hotel expenses, was paid for by fund drives in this eastern Oregon community. Fund-raising efforts topped $10,000 recently, and are still going on.

Since returning home, Ida says the the biggest change she has noticed is the attitude of people who see her.

"People don't stop and stare at me anymore," said Ida, who went through years of cruelty and taunting because of the deformity she had since birth. "Now I'll see people on the street and they'll just stop and smile at me or say 'Hi.'"

Other than the new attitude among members of the community, Ida said her day-to-day life has not changed much since the operation. However, she has missed a few days of school because of headaches caused by bones in her face growing back together.

She is adjusting to using both eyes together now, which she couldn't do before the surgery.

"The people at school have been great," her mother, Jacquie, said. "They are keeping a close watch on her and send her home when necessary."

Ida will return to New York for more surgery Nov. 6. An operation to rebuild her upper jaw will follow, but that can be done in Portland or Seattle.

Ida says word of her operation has led others with the same affliction to seek help, and that Dr. John Marquis Converse, who directed her surgery, is overflowing with patients.

That, says Ida, is what pleases her most.

His little 'pickup' grew up

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — On the back of Duane Mellot's pickup truck is a bumper sticker that reads, "When I grow up I want to be a diesel." That's exactly what happened.

Mellot, a sheet metal worker for 22 years, started with a 1955 half-ton pickup, took the body off and kept the frame and running gear. He mounted a Jeep pickup cab on the frame and fabricated the hood and fenders from fiber glass. He can raise the whole works, just like on big trucks, to tinker with the engine.

"I wanted a pickup and I wanted it to be different," he said.

White House transition

difficulty in transition. This was in the days before ex-presidents had the Secret Service with them in retirement. Returned to Independence, Harry Truman drove his own car, carried in the firewood, hauled out the ashes, helped with the dishes and, like most of his countrymen in a democracy, caught occasional hell from his wife for shooting from the hip.

"I don't worry about myself," Truman used to say. "I just have a good time as I go along. Leaving the White House involves no problem of adjustment if you were a common citizen before."

This quality of perspective, this self-sense of being ordinary, is frequently ascribed to one of Truman's admirers, Gerald Ford. It is never ascribed to Henry Kissinger. Which brings us to the Eastern Airlines shuttle, which out of towners may have to be told is the non-plush, non-reservation, common mode of air travel between Washington and New York. Though both have grown accustomed to government planes, people in Washington can somehow visualize Gerald Ford flying the shuttle but not Henry Kissinger.

And so, in a recent conversation about his departure from office and all its perks, Kissinger was asked by a reporter:

"Mr. Secretary, is it true that CBS has offered you $50,000 for the exclusive rights to film you getting on the shuttle?"

Kissinger: "True. They offered to make it $75,000 if I'd get into a middle seat."

Kissinger can and probably will make a pile of money from books, which should ease the pain of his transition. It is also likely that the new administration will call on him now and then for special uses. But mostly, day to day, he will be out of it, away from the action and the power, cut off from the daily cables from around the world, the umbilical cord of master diplomats.

"It will be difficult for him," said an associate, "the first time a head of state comes to Washington and Henry is not invited to the state dinner at the White House or the visitor doesn't seek him out for tea privately.

"He will no longer be able to affect events. He will move off the stage, where he was a leading player for eight years, to a seat in the audience, and that will not be easy for Henry Kissinger."

Lawrence Eagleburger, a deputy under-secretary of state:

"You can't live, as we have, with issues that might have involved the life and death of the country, and not be spoiled for most other kinds of work.

"It's like pot. You begin to live off the pace of events and the challenges that come around every day or every week. It keeps you jacked up. It is its own opiate and all of us who are leaving will have a problem getting over it."

Having become a familiar face on the evening news from crisis points all over the world, Kissinger, at least, will be spared the fate of one his predecessors. Dean Acheson left the state department in 1953 an embittered man, succeeded by a secretary who sought to discredit his policies completely.

A few months out of office, Acheson was riding a Pullman car where the man across the aisle was clearly having difficulty placing him. Finally, the stranger came over.

"Excuse me, sir, but aren't you John Foster Dulles?"

Acheson, mustache quivering: "Good (pause) God (pause), No!

One man who does not mind, in the least, not being recognized by strangers is William E. Colby, until 10 months ago director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Now in private life, writing a book, giving lectures and boning up for a law practice he left 26 years ago, America's former chief spook still attracts protestors, especially on publicized campus appearances.

Colby is no longer attended by CIA bodyguards, a fact, he said, which does not make him uneasy although he still carries top secrets in his head. He takes only ordinary precautions, he said, like having good locks on the doors of his home and not following a repetitious pattern of behavior, like being at the same streeet corner the same time every day.

"I don't see that anything more is necessary," he said. "After all, capturing me and squeezing secrets out of me would be quite a venture, a very difficult operation for any foreign country. The odds would be prohibitive."

Colby does not miss, he said, the lure of the inner councils of government, the occasional crisis atmosphere or the perquisites of office. What he does miss, he said, is information.

"I have to work hard to follow what is going on in the world through the papers and television. In one half hour of reading at the CIA I used to be very well informed. Also, I still find it difficult to read a whole book. The CIA accustomed me to short, sharp resumes."

Lawrence Eagleburger will miss it all, including having his mind and stamina stretched to the outer limits by Kissinger, a fierce taskmaster. "There wasn't a day I didn't have to be doing my best. If I gave him one sloppy answer, I'd get hit in the chops." He'll even miss the foulups, one in particular.

An American ambassador in country X of Africa was about to be replaced when the Secretary of State took off on his first African swing. Somebody goofed and the change in ambassadors was announced in Washington prematurely, just as Kissinger was landing in country X, to be greeted by the envoy just fired. Kissinger was on the phone moments later. Eagleburger apologized frantically for the awkward mistake in timing.

"That's all right,

Communication failures hit

'Street law' for deaf college students set

EDITOR'S NOTE: For years America's deaf have suffered at the hands of the law. And now a start is being made to help them.

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Sy DuBow lectures to the eight students in the classroom, he holds his hands before him in the semblance of a tipping pair of scales, the sign for a trial.

He cups two fingers in the shape of a letter "G" and strikes his heart, the sign for guilty.

DuBow, relying on sign language and lip-reading, is teaching a course in "street law" to college undergraduates who will face even more difficulty than most people with the intricacies of legal procedures.

His students are deaf. The course, the only one of its kind in the country, is a project of the National Center for Law and the Deaf (NCLD). It is jointly sponsored by Gallaudet College and the National Law Center of George Washington University. Dubow is the project's legal director.

Located on the campus of Gallaudet, the world's only liberal arts college for the deaf, the center also operates a walk in legal clinic for deaf people, works for legislation and court rulings to help the deaf, and conducts deaf rights workshops.

Until the center was established in October, 1975, there was no national organization to help deaf people solve their special legal problems. And there are 13.4 million people in this country suffering from deafness or hearing impairment.

The problems mainly arise from the communications barriers between the deaf and the hearing. In court, for example, they have trouble getting adequate interpreters, and sometimes lawyers who understand their problems.

The center operates under a 30-month grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The appropriation for the current fiscal year is $80,000, down 15 per cent because of cuts by the last Congress.

Workshops have been held in various cities on landlord-tenant relations problems of deaf people in dealing with the police, and consumer protection.

"Most of our clinic cases stem from commuication failures, rather than from outright discrimination," says Liz Renuart, student director of the clinic.

The center is seeking to set up similar clinics in cooperation with organizations in Philadelphia, Chicago and San Francisco.

The center also is encouraging the training of more deaf lawyers to represent deaf clients.

Lisa Berke, a deaf New Yorker attending George Washington's law school, said she'll definitely practice among the deaf after graduation.

"The deaf community doesn't have any lawyers on their own," she said in an interview with the student newspaper, The Advocate. "There are about 10 to 15 hearing-impaired lawyers in the country. But we don't know all of them ... or if they are really helping the deaf communities in their states or not."

White House

Larry," said the modern Metternich, after a pause. "Just don't announce my resignation until I get home because I need the plane to get back."

Richard B. Cheney, 35 and about to leave government, majored in political science in college and ultimately reached the "best place to practice the art form," the White House. Ford's chief of staff will miss:

"Not being involved. Not being able to walk down the hall to the Oval Office and recommend a course of action to the President of the United States. Not being there where fundamental decisions are made affecting the life of a country. It's heady stuff but nobody does it forever."

William Coleman, 56, secretary of transportation and a lawyer, will miss the combat of cabinet debate and trying to get legislation out of a Democratic Congress. He is frank enough to admit, "trying to work your will is one of those things which have always given me pleasure."

Ron Nessen, 42, a media man himself, will not miss combat with the White House media. "As individuals," he said, "reporters may be as compassionate as anyone.

He takes with him this framed quotation from his wall: "A press officer is like a man pegged out on an African ant hill for the termites of the daily press to eat into at will."

At this writing, Nessen doesn't know what he'll do after Jan. 20. Neither does Elliot Richardson, 56, a man with special problems. He frankly wants to run for President. What to do in the meantime?

"You might say I'm sort of a professional cabinet officer," said the man who has held more cabinet jobs than any in history. "My highest and best uses, I guess, are in the kinds of things I've been doing and there are no obvious substitutes."

Frank Zarb, 41, federal energy administrator, goes back to the investment business in New York, where he made $120,000 a year before coming to Washington for a third of that income. It was not a sacrifice, he says. He is grateful for the experience and the insight it gave him into the processes of government.

He goes with two convictions. One is that "people who say you can't get anything done in government because of the process probably couldn't get anything done elsewhere in life." The other is that "federal bureaucrats, as individuals, are the best, most talented, most dedicated employes I've seen anywhere."

He leaves content in the knowledge that "we turned the energy program around. We got at least half the legislation we asked for from Congress, not a bad batting average. It's a feeling of satisfaction that when you cut away all the political demagoguery you really have been able to affect the process."

He does not, he says, think his ego will suffer the bends out of office because he frequently reminded himself the job was temporary and he was not indispensable. In terms of ego, his wife was of inestimatable value.

"Frank," Mrs. Zarb used to say every night to the United States energy czar, "don't forget to take out the garbage."

'Arrived in the mainstream of American life'

Museum boom: trend to a growing interest in art

EDITOR'S NOTE: In a nation of trends, one of the latest is the boom in museum attendance and the growing interest in art. "The farmer's wife is no longer content to clip the cover of the Saturday Evening Post," says a museum official.

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

In a storefront museum on New York City's Staten Island, Elaine Schweninger guides 100 schoolchildren a day through an exhibit of Egyptian hieroglyphics, then shows them how to draw their own symbols and paint their faces.

On a Navajo reservation in Tsaile, Ariz., Harry Walters is assembling a display of Indian weavings and a collection of recorded ritual chants for a new $4 million cultural center.

At these and more conventional museums across the nation, interest in art and cultural exhibits is booming. Attendance rose during the Bicentennial year and new museums are springing up while old ones are being enlarged, an informal survey shows.

"Everywhere you look, museums have arrived into the mainstream of American life," says Joe Noble, president of the American Association of Museums.

In Texas, 140 museums are under construction or planned.

At the Charles M. Russell Museum and Gallery in Helena, Mont., "attendance is up so far our girls have lost count," says spokeswoman Dolores Brown.

At the Philadelphia Museum of Art, a Bicentennial exhibition and newly installed air-conditioning helped push attendance over the 500,000 mark in eight months. That was higher than the previous 12-month total.

"Where once art museums interested mainly the rich, now if a museum opens in a community it's a cause for great rejoicing — just as public libraries were in the late 19th century," Noble said.

"More people are spending time in museums every year because we're growing more sophisticated as a nation and people have more leisure time," Noble said. He also said he felt educational television has played a significant role in awakening the public to the varieties of art that are available.

"The Bicentennial, of course, generated tremendous awareness of American art," he said, "but the interest extends back to the European masters — and to contemporary art as well."

Spokesman Jim Hunter offers a more prosaic explanation of why this year's attendance at the Toledo, Ohio, Museum of Art has passed 400,000 in a city of 340,000 people.

"More people are taking advantage of things to do close to home, because they can't afford to travel as much as they used to," he said.

Carol Bannerman, editor of the museum association's newsletter, says a "noticeable increase in the number of visits" has occurred during the past year, "despite almost universal increased admission charges."

Ironically, the higher attendance "creates its own problems in a time of severe economic conditions — a demand for additional shows, service and educational programs," she said.

But she said individual and corporate donations to museums, particularly art museums, are also increasing. In a recent survey, she said, 90 per cent of the museums responding reported gains in private memberships.

The Association, headquartered in Washington, says that of the roughly 1,000 art museums in the United States, 44 per cent have annual budgets under $50,000 and 5 per cent have budgets of $1 million or more.

Noble said the museum boom has been aided by a trend among wealthy collectors to give their art works to museums often at considerable tax savings.

The Pasadena, Calif., Museum of Modern Art doubled its attendance to 2,000 a week after industrialist Norton Simon donated his classical art collection — and the name was changed to The Norton Simon Museum of Art.

New Museums are as diverse as the communities they serve.

The Staten Island Children's Museum, which opened Oct. 3, was sought by residents who "think of going to the city as a big production and wanted their kids to have easy access to art," said Mrs. Schweninger, program director.

Operating on a $130,000 budget from foundation grants, the museum borrowed hieroglyphics from New York's Metropolitan Museum for its first exhibit, and aims at getting children to respond actively to what they see.

"After they look at the hieroglyphics, we have an easel where they write their own symbols and, occasionally, dirty words," Mrs. Schweninger said. "There's another section where they can decorate their faces."

On the campus of the Navajo Community College in northeastern Arizona, Museum curator Walters has two floors of the Ned A. Hatahli Cultural Center to fill with indian artifacts.

The museum is part of what Mrs. Bannerman calls a "trend of ethnic groups responding to a lack of correct handling of their culture."

It opens in February with an exhibit of weavings lent by the University of New Mexico and a "Chant Room" where visitors can listen to tapes and records of war cries and other tribal chants.

In Texas, an unprecedented wave of museum fever sparked plans for 140 new museums in addition to the present 350. That's too many, says Cindy Sherrell, director of the museum services division for the Texas Historical Society. Most of the new ones specialize in local history, but 20 are primarily for display of painting and sculpture, she said.

"We're going through a great nostalgic era," she said, "Once a town starts a museum, you get the old American competitiveness where another town 30 miles away has to have one too."

For example, she said, in Yorktown, a south-central Texas community of 2,723 persons, "somebody donated two buildings, they raised $65,000 and now they have a museum."

Mrs. Sherrell said she "tries to discourage" museum projects in communities that may be unable to support them once the initial private contributions have disappeared.

"I'm afraid more than 20 per cent of the new art museums will be closed within a few years," she said. "Most of them are relying on traveling exhibitions, and they just don't have the funds for local paintings."

Other areas of the South besides Texas also are experiencing rapid cultural growth.

Atlanta's High Museum of Art keeps no precise attendance figures, but it reports steadily rising attendance as "we've had more and more exhibits and we've added two new galleries," a spokeswoman said. "We're growing with the city."

In Birmingham, Ala., the 17 year old Museum of Art is getting 1,500 more visitors a month than last year, when total attendance was 85,000. A new wing has expanded floor space from 68,000 to 88,000 square feet. And the museum recently presented the largest show ever in this country of the work of Israeli sculptor Yaacv Agam.

"It's really astonishing when you realize that 25 years ago there was not even a museum here," said director John Farmer.

One of the few museums reporting a major attendance decline is the Detroit Institute of Arts, where economic troubles forced a shutdown a year and a half ago. Three weeks latr it reopened, but for only five days a week instead of six, and with a donation requested at the door.

Attendance this year is down 45 per cent, from 555,000 to 300,000 and officials say part of the reason is lingering public confusion about whether the museum is open at all.

Snoopy, Lovelace win votes

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Snoopy, Linda Lovelace, Mickey Mouse and Richard Nixon all were somebody's choice for president of the United States in last November's election, the New York state Board of Elections says.

They were just a few of the names that more than 8,000 voters wrote on their ballots, rather than choosing from the list of candidates already there.

Independent party candidate Eugene McCarthy, ousted from the ballot by a court ruling, was the leader among write-in choices, with several thousand votes, the board said.

Some presumably nostalgic voters wrote in the names of former presidents, including George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Harry Truman.

Stage is set for 'Super Sunday'

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

PASADENA — The super buildup is finally over. Now we can only hope for a super show.

Super Bowl XI (12:30 p.m., channel 4) could be the best offensive display yet. On the other hand, like most of its predecessors, it could be a super disappointment.

The ingredients for a close, exciting football game are all here. Two offensive minded teams led by two veteran quarterbacks who like to score touchdownsand possessing brilliant career records.

It'll be a pleasure to have a game with both quarterbacks calling their own signals. Ken Stabler of the Oakland Raiders and Fran Tarkenton each do just that.

The similarity doesn't end there. They each also have bad knees. Stabler has had his for a couple of years. Tarkenton picked up a knee injury in the playoff game with Washington.

It's that one that may change the complexion of today's contest. How much the knee hampers frantic Francis, if it hampers him at all, will probably decide how well the Vikes' offense works.

Tarkenton probably won't run unless absolutely forced to. If his passing is affected, as it was in the game with the Rams, it will probably result in a one-sided Oakland win.

"It (the knee) hurts," Tarkenton admits. "I don't know what's wrong with it and I don't want to know until after this game. If I find out it's ligament or cartilage damage, then I'll have it taken care of.

"Right now I'm moving better. But it hurts."

Tarkenton hasn't scrambled much the last few years anyway, so the only concern is whether or not he will be able to throw well.

Stabler, the big, lefthander out of Alabama, lost his mobility when he had his second knee operation and hasn't run much since.

"I could still run pretty good after the first operation," Stabler says candidly. "But now it's pretty embarrassing. About all I do now is run out of bounds."

However, in big games when the chips are down, the"Snake", as Stabler is called, has been known to slither for important yardage or touchdowns in big plays.

Possibly the best passing quarterback in the game, the 6-3, 215-pound Stabler reads defenses superbly and throws with incredible accuracy.

If anything should happen to Stabler, the Raiders have an excellent backup in former USC star Mike Rae.

A "rookie" by the ridiculous NFL system that refuses to recognize any and all experience not gained in the NFL, Rae is a veteran signal caller with three years of top drawer experience in the Canadian Football League.

On the other hand, if Tarkenton is off his game or hurt, Minnesota's quality at quarterback drops way off.

The backups, Bob Lee and Bob Berry are, at best, merely journeymen. Lee threw only 30 passes all season and just one in two playoff games.

Berry, recovering from a knee injury, has not thrown a pass in game competition since the 1975 season when he threw only six all year.

Weather, apparently, won't be a problem. Even if it is, Tarkenton says he will still put the ball in the air.

"Hey, I'm not gonna run off-tackle plays," he grinned. "I'm not gonna go into a hole just because it might have been raining."

Stabler, likewise, indicated he didn't see any reason the Raiders should change from the wide open style of play that has brought them so much success including the best (15-1 to Minnesota's 13-2-1) record in the NFL.

Along the same lines, there is still a question about the effectiveness of the rebuilt Oakland front line and alignment.

Only Otis Sistrunk remains from the original front four that opened training camp. John Matuszak and Dave Rowe have replaced Art Thoms, Horace Jones and Tony Cline in a 3-4-4 alignment instead of the previous 4-3-4.

Ted (The Mad Stork) Hendricks and former USC star Willie Hall have been added to the linebacking corps. They joined Phil Villapiano and Monte Johnson.

Matuszak, Hendricks and Hall were all signed as free agents. For that matter, so was kicker Errol Mann who replaced the injured Fred Steinfort near the end of the season.

It has been Madden's best job of coaching, taking a team that should have been crippled by injuries (fullback Marv Hubbard also was lost for the season) all the way to the Super Bowl and recording the best record in the NFL while doing it.

Madden is concerned not only with stopping, or at least shackling, Tarkenton, but also containing Chuck Foreman, the Vikes' all-purpose running back.

"The biggest thing Foreman does is make you miss him," Madden claims. "Foreman catches a pass for seven or eight yards and runs 55-60 yards with it. He makes a big play out out of a little play."

Each team has an outstanding corps of receivers. Cliff Branch, Fred Biletnikoff and Dave Caspar of Oakland are counterbalanced by Ahmed Rashad, Sammy White and Stu Voight. And Tarkenton has an added threat in Foreman whom he throws to as much as the receivers.

If anything happens to Branch, it is not known how effective MIke Siani will be. Siani has a strained knee. EVerybody else on both teams reportedly is healthy.

Both teams have excellent special teams. The Vikings have blocked 15 kicks including seven conversions, six field goals and two punts.

Raiders' punter Ray Guy, best in the league, hasn't had a punt blocked yet (four years in the league). Guy also kicks off for Oakland and it wouldn't be surprising if he is used for field goal attempts, at least if the game is on the line, today.

Oakland has been favored since the contestants were determined. The feeling here is that if Tarkenton has a good day, the Vikes will surprise. Otherwise, it's Oakland all the way, possibly by a wide margin.

Raiders still favored

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) The Oakland Raiders remained four-point favorites over the Minnesota Vikings Saturday on the eve of the Super Bowl.

Both the Churchill Downs and the Santa Anita race books in this state, where betting is legal, quoted the same odds. Some earlier odds had given the Raiders a 4½-point edge.

Broncos have good outing

Cal Poly's basketball squad had little trouble posting its fourth win of the season (against eight losses) here Saturday night on it's home court, as the Broncos downed visiting Cal State-Dominguez Hills, 78-60.

The Poly cagers led all the way in the game, building up a lead which was at its biggest, 18 points, at the game's conclusion.

The Broncos placed four men in double figures in the scoring column, led by Charles Johnson's 18 points. Jack Gamulin added 12, Henry Randolph 11 and Tom Ispas 10 to the win.

Dominguez, now 1-8 on the season, was led by Elliott Lawerence with 15 points and Mike Dukes with 13.

Dominguez actually wound up the game with the slight edge in rebounding, 40-39. However, the Broncos had a good shooting night, hitting 45 percent of their shots from the floor, 37 of 83.

The game gave Poly coach Don Hogan a chance to look at some of his subs, and ex-Ganesha High star Broderick Hunter came through with eight points in the late going for his best effort since becoming eligible at the mid-way point of the season.

Cal Poly will try to stay on the winning track when it hosts Point Loma College on Tuesday at 8 p.m. The Bronco cagers open CCAA play on Friday night at UC Riverside.

Flyers rout Kings, 6-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Right winger Don Saleski scored twice and center Mel Bridgman had one goal and two assists as the Philadelphia Flyers extended their home unbeaten streak to 19 games with a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Kings in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

The Flyers, who lead the Patrick Division with a 25-8-9 mark, are unbeaten at home since Oct. 14, when they lost to Montreal 7-1.

Bridgman opened the Flyers' scoring just 1:37 into the game when he deflected a 35-foot by defenseman Tom Bladon past goalie Gary Edwards. Saleski and Gary Dornhoefer, who scored the 200th goal of his NHL career, boosted the Flyers into a 3-0 lead later in the opening period.

Wash. State stays with Pac-8 leaders

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State senior Steve Puidokas gunned in 23 points to lead the Coulars to a 77-63 basketball victory over California in Pacific-8 Conference action Saturday.

Puidokas combined with seniors Harold Rhodes and Marty Giovacchini for 56 points, as Washington State remained among the Pac-8 unbeatens with a 2-0 record.

Ray Murrz led a balanced California attack with 15 points, as California built a 5-point halftime lead.

Top-ranked cagers all post victories

SEATTLE (AP) — James Hardy scored 25 points and Bill Cartwright added 22 to lead top-ranked San Francisco to an 81-63 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over Seattle Saturday night.

The victory boosted the Dons' to 17-0 overall and 2-0 in the WCAC.

The Dons, capitalizing on their superior size and strength inside, moved ahead for good 65 on Marlon Redmond's tip-in with 17:45 left in the first half. The Chieftans had trouble against San Francisco's tight man-to-man defense and fell behind 37-27 at halftime. Hardy had 16 points and Cartwright 10 in the half.

Seattle, 1-1 in league play and 6-6 overall, narrowed San Francisco's lead to four points at 4440 on Jawann Oldham's basket with 16:20 to go. But the Dons countered with consecutive baskets by Hardy, John Cox and Cartwright for a 50-40 advantage.

The Dons twice led by 20 points in the second half, the last at 73-53 with 4:20 remaining.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rick Robey scored on a layup with eight seconds remaining to give third-ranked Kentucky a 64-62 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Vanderbilt Saturday.

Kentucky had held the ball for one shot after Vanderbilt tied the game 62-62 with 1:08 remaining. The Wildcats called time out with 28 seconds left and then set up the play which resulted in Robey getting the basket after a pass from guard Larry Johnson.

Kentucky led throughout the first half by as much as 11 points and held a seven-point lead, 39-32, at halftime.

In the first 8½ minutes of the second half, Vanderbilt outscored the Wildcats 18-6. The Commodores built leads of five points on three occasions before Kentucky went ahead 59-58 with 6:55 remaining on a basket by Robey.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Reginald King scored 23 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead fourth-ranked Alabama to an 80-77 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Louisiana State Saturday night.

At one point in the first half the Tide trailed 24-12, but Dor Bowerman and King led an eight-point burst just before halftime to get the Tide within 36-35.

A three-point play by King put Alabama ahead at the beginning of the second half, and the Tide led the rest of the way.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Rickey Green scored 22 points, 13 in the final eight minutes when Michigan had to come from behind, as the fifth-ranked Wolverines took a 66-63 Big Ten basketball victory Saturday over Wisconsin.

Both teams were embarrassingly cold from the floor in the first half, when Wisconsin didn't get a field goal until 11½ minutes into the game. But the game picked up excitement in the second half, even though the cold shooting continued, and it was nip and tuck the final 20 minutes.

Michigan led 27-22 at halftime, but the Badgers battled back quickly, mostly on the shooting of James Gregory, to lead by as many as six points seven minutes into the second half.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Sixth-ranked North Carolina, out for revenge after last year's loss to Virginia in the Atlantic Coast Conference finals, rode hot shooting by Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford to an easy 91-67 college basketball victory Saturday.

North Carolina, now 10-1 overall and 2-0 in the ACC, was in command early and led 43-27 by halftime. The Tar Heels stayed out in front the rest of the way, riding a 72 per cent shooting performance, led by LaGarde's 24 points and Ford's 21.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Skip Brown sank a free throw with three seconds remaining in overtime, giving 10th-ranked Wake Forest an 8685 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over 15th ranked Maryland Saturday.

Brown, who scored 22 points, hit a jumper with two seconds left in regulation time for an 81-79 Wake Forest lead. But Maryland called time, and Brian Magid popped in a 30footer to send the game into overtime.

The Deamon Deacons, now 11-1 including 2-0 in the ACC, scored their first victory at Maryland since 1969 after blowing a 10-point halftime lead.

Ballard is hero again

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — Greg Ballard, the best basketball player to ever come out of Pomona, did his thing again at the Los Angeles Sports Arena Saturday.

The 6-foot-7 All-American candidate scored 27 points and grabbed seven rebounds to lead Oregon to a 64-52 win over USC to complete a weekend sweep in the Southland for the Ducks.

It was the last Southern California weekend for the senior from Pomona's Garey High during his career in the Pacific-8 Conference.

His next playing appearance in the Southland will probably at the Forum next year as Ballard figures to be a high choice in the National Basketball Association draft.

"I'm starting to think about my basketball future," Ballard said. "I've been talking to agents and I know scouts have been looking at me. I would like to stay out on the West Coast but I will go wherever the draft takes me."

Ballard was obviously delighted about the weekend start which gives Oregon an early advantage in the Pac-8 race with a 2-0 record on the road.

"We wanted to get off on the right foot," Ballard said. "This wasn't too bad, was it? This is the first Oregon team to ever sweep a two-game series in Southern California two straight years."

Of course, the key to sweeping a pair in L.A. is beating UCLA and Ballard took care of that chore Friday night when he sank two free throws with one second remaining for a 61-60 victory at Pauley Pavilion.

Was Ballard nervous as the UCLA fans roared when he stepped to the foul line?

"I had never really been in a situation like that," Ballard said. "So I used some reverse physciology and made myself think it was a McArthur Court (Oregon's home) crowd and I tuned the noise out. There was really nothing to it."

Ballard was red hot in the early moments against USC as he scored 16 of his points in the first 10 minutes of the game.

"I just came out hot," he said. "I am always more fired up playing here in front of my family and friends."

Ballard ended up playing 36 minutes in taking a fourminute rest midway in the second half. He sank 10 of 16 field goals and made all seven free throws.

"I felt good tonight," he said. "I had the flu when we were playing in the Far West Classic but I have my strength back now."

Ballard, who led the Pac-8 in scoring last year and earned All-Conference honors, is now Oregon's leader with the loss of guard Ron Lee to the NBA.

"I guess I am a leader more by example than by words," he said.

"Greg is a great player and he is the best in the Pacific-8," Harter said about his star. "His leadership is a very positive thing all the time. He is a very unselfish player. I would say his pro potential is very good. He got us going tonight."

Beating USC was important for the Ducks as an upset loss to the Trojans would have taken away some from Friday's win at UCLA.

CLEVE PORTER
. . . Trojan forward

It was the Trojans' 16th consecutive loss in Pac-8 play.

USC rallied from a 34-25 deficit at halftime to give Oregon a scare in closing the margin to four twice during the second half before the Ducks pulled away at the end.

Saturday's match-up between Pomonans Ballard and USC's Cleve Porter didn't amount to much as Porter was still bothered by the twisted ankle suffered earlier in the week.

Porter played only 16 minutes in scoring six points and grabbing one rebound.

His ineffectiveness because of the injury greatly reduced any hopes USC had of a win over the weekend against Oregon State and Oregon.

Unfortunately, Porter was injured just after enjoying his best weekend in a Trojan uniform at the Lobo Classic when he made the All-Tournament team.

Oregon (11-2) will return to Eugene next weekend to host Washington and Washington State while USC (3-10) will visit Stanford and California.

Bruins rebound to down OSU

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seventh-ranked UCLA, led by Marques Johnson and David Greenwood, outscored Oregon State 16-2 in the final four minutes to defeat the Beavers 83-66 in a Pacific-8 Conference basketball game Saturday night.

With the score 67-64, the Bruins reeled off 14 straight points to put the game out of reach.

The victory was the Bruins' first conference triumph of the season, following their 61-60 upset at the hands of Oregon Friday night. UCLA is 11-2 overall.

Greenwood and Johnson each had 19 points to pace the Bruins, while guard Raymond Townsend added 14.

The Beavers were led by senior guard Rocky Smith, who topped the scoring with 28 points. Guard George Tucker contributed 18 points, while forward Don Smith chipped in 10.

UCLA, which had led from the opening buzzer, fell behind for the first time at 55-54 with just less than 10 minutes left in the game. But the Bruins came back, scoring the next six points to take a five-point advantage, and they never trailed after that.

The loss evened Oregon State's conference record at 11, and the Beavers are 7-7 overall.

The Bruins started quickly, taking a 5-0 lead before Oregon State finally got on the board on a 10-foot jumper by Rocky Smith. UCLA extended its lead to nine points, 11-2, before the Beavers responded with eight unanswered points and avoided a possible runaway.

UCLA shot a remarkable 67 per cent from the floor in the first half, while Oregon State hit a respectable 52 per cent of its shots.

The Bruins were never behind in the opening 20 minutes, leading 36-29 with less than four minutes to go.

The Beavers came back to trim the deficit to 36-35 with 90 seconds remaining, but then Hamilton hit a 13-foot jumper to give the Bruins a three-point lead.

Huskies claim Pac-8 victory

SEATTLE (AP) — Mike Neill tossed in 20 points and 7-foot James Edwards added 19 to lead Washington to a 98-77 Pacific-8 Conference basketball victory over Stanford in a regionally-televised game Saturday afternoon.

The Cardinals, now 0-2 in conference play and 7-5 overall, had trouble penetrating Washington's zone defense and fell victim to the Huskies' potent fast break in a decisive 12-minute span in the second half.

Kim Stewart added 15 points, Chester Dorsey 14 and Walker 12 for the Huskies.

Mike Bratz led Stanford with 21 points and Kimberly Belton added 19.

The victory was Washington's tenth straight after four season-opening losses, and was Coach Marv Harshman's 100th triumph in six seasons with the Huskies.

North rallies to win Senior Bowl

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — North quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz fueled a frantic Missouri-style comeback and beat the clock as well as the South in Saturday's play-for-pay Senior Bowl football game.

But to accomodate national television and its own ticking clock, the Most Valuable Player award and all the big money was doled out to others before his last-minute heroics.

An equally disappointed South Coach Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins put it another way: "Once again, it proves the game is not over until the final whistle blows."

Pisarkiewicz, who helped engineer Missouri's zany year of triumphs and disasters, rallied the North to its Senior Bowl victory with two touchdown passes in the final two minutes. The last was a four-yard lob to Tony Hill of Stanford to the right corner of the end zone with only 33 seconds left.

It capped a sensational day for the 6-foot-4 Missouri signal caller—but the MVP award aready had been given to quarterback Tommy Kramer of Rice.

The five-member Senior Bowl committee, composed of pro scouts, had chosen Kramer as the top star and given him a free automobile as well as handing out $2,500 prizes to four others minutes before Pisarkiewicz turned hero.

The Senior Bowl spokesman said the awards were decided before the end of the game so they could be announced on NBC, which was televising the game nationally.

Some Senior Bowl officials talked of coming up with a special prize for Pisarkiewicz, but no immediate decision was reached.

North Coach Forrest Gregg said Pisarkiewicz should have gotten the award and added flatly, "He won the game for us."

Kramer combined on an 80yard touchdown pass play with Terry Robiskie of Louisiana State to put the South ahead 24-14 in the third quarter.

That third-quarter bomb came only moments after a North drive was killed by an end zone interception, and it seemed to knock the wind out of the North for most of the fourth quarter.

The winning drive was highlighted by five Pisarkiewicz completions in a race against the clock, and he completed six passes in the touchdown drive moments earlier.

Pisarkiewicz completed 23 of 40 passes for 201 yards and the two last-gasp touchdowns, and though he missed out on the MVP award because the judges had already voted, a Senior Bowl spokesman said sponsors planned a special award for him.

The topsy-turvy game began with first the North and then the South scoring on their opening possessions. The North led 14-10 at halftime, thanks to a 44-yard touchdown pass from Ronnie Hickerson of Tulsa to John Kimbro, of nearby Citronelle, Ala. and who played for St. Cloud State in Minnesota.

But the South came back strong in the third period, with Robiskie sweeping right end from four yards out for a score set up when Wendell Tyler of UCLA fumbled a towering punt at the North 19.

That made it 17-14 in favor of the South, and Robiskie teamed with Kramer for the 80-yard strike that gave the South its big lead until Pisarkiewicz got warmed up.

Evans paces West

HONOLULU (AP) — Southern California quarterback Vince Evans, a last-minute choice for the 31st annual Hula Bowl, reverted to a familiar play Saturday as he sparked the West to a 20-17 football victory over the East.

Evans had a hand in three touchdowns and engineered the drive which gave the West its first victory in the history of the all-star classic.

"Not a bad sub," said West Coach Mike White of California.

A 45-yard pass from Evans to Trojan teammate Shelton Diggs set up the three-yard touchdown run by Missouri's Curtis Brown with 1:13 remaining.

"It was a USC play," Evans said of the bomb. "I didn't get a whole lot of practice time this week. I thought if I got in the game I'd just give it my all."

Evans ran two yards for a touchdown on his first appearance in the first quarter and tossed a seven-yard scoring pass to tight end Don Hasselbeck of Colorado after going in on a third-and-goal situation in the fourth quarter.

Heisman trophy winner Tony Dorsett, who ran 47 yards for an East touchdown and finished with 98 yards and 19 carries, was named the game's outstanding offensive player.

But the ballots had been counted before Evans went to work.

Trying the right end on thirdand-goal at the seven, Evans reversed, backed off nearly 20 yards and appeared to have a safe convoy to the end zone on the left side. He pulled up, however, and lobbed the ball to Hasselbeck to cut the East lead to 17-14 with 6:03 left.

After an eight-yard punt by Tom Skladany of Ohio State gave the West possession at its 48, Evans went for broke, missing a bomb to Hasselbeck and then finding Diggs at the seven.

Fullback Robin Earl of Washington bulled to the three, then Brown, who fumbled earlier to kill a West drive, raced around right end for the winning touchdown.

Skladany kicked a 41-yard field goal in the first quarter for the East. The East scored its first touchdown on a 26-yard second-quarter drive following a fumble by the West's Ricky Bell of Southern Cal. Tony Dungy of Minnesota rifled the ball 12 yards to tight end Jim Corbett of Pittsburgh for the score.

La Verne pulls SCIAC upset

La Verne College vaulted into a first-place tie with Occidental in the SCIAC basketball standings Saturday night, as the Leopards upset host Redlands, 74-72.

Occidental kept pace by easing past visiting Pomona-Pitzer, 78-61, while in another SCIAC cage contest Whittier bounced Claremont-Mudd 99-81.

The Leos' Michael Winze sank two free throws with only two seconds remaining at Redlands Saturday night to give the locals a hard-earned victory. Winze was fouled on an in-bounds play and calmly canned both charity tosses in the one-and-one situation to win it.

The La Verne front wall of forwards Mike Sharp and Dennis Munoz and center Ulysses Ruffin had a big night. Sharp had 23 points and six rebounds, Ruffin 16 points and a game-high nine rebounds, and Munoz 13 points.

La Verne, now 2-0 in league and 4-8 on the year, erased an eight-point deficit at half to post the win.

Redlands freshman Steve Shy, the former Bonita High

Oxy guard Steve Snodgrass tallied 25 points to lead his team past visiting Pomona-Pitzer. Oxy is now 2-0 in SCIAC games and 10-2 on the year. P-P falls to 0-2 and 3-10.

Center Ed McFadden had 14 for the Sagehens, teammate Brandon Boyd chipping in with 12.

Whittier placed all five starters in double figures, led by Steve Simmons' 23, to down host C-M Saturday. The Stags were led by Dan Butterfield with 14 and Rick Garwacki with 13.

C-M is now 1-1 in SCIAC action and 6-9 on the year. Whittier is 1-0 and 8-4.

Next SCIAC action will be Wednesday night. At that time, La Verne will visit Whittier, Pomona-Pitzer will host Redlands and Claremont-Mudd will entertain Caltech. All those games are slated for 8 p.m. starts.

Sports news in brief

QUEBEC (AP) — Curt Brackenbury scored two goals Saturday, helping the Quebec Nordiques score a 6-1 triumph over the Soviet Union's national team in the final game of the Russians' eight-game tour of World Hockey Association cities.

The Soviets won six and lost twice on the tour. They dropped the first game of the visit to the New England Whalers.

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Bill Shoemaker rode Cojak to victory in the sixth race and won with Romantic Lead in the eighth Saturday to sweep both ends of the split $35,000 Malibu Stakes at Santa Anita and win four consecutive races.

The 45-year-old rider was not aboard the public choices in either of the two stakes races, and had to come from off the pace midway in both seven-furlong divisions to score his 690th and 691st career victories in stakes races.

CANYON, Tex. (AP) — Embattled Gene Mayfield, struggling under the pressure of maintaining big time football at West Texas State, resigned as head coach and athletic director Saturday effective April 1.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — World Grand Prix champion James Hunt of England won the pole position Saturday for the Argentine Grand Prix, the inaugural race of the 1977 Formula One season.

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash. began the 1977 pro bowling season with a convincing victory Saturday in an $80,000 Pro Bowlers Association tournament.

PHOENIX (AP) — Jerry Pate had to birdie the final hole—rolling in the short putt moments after the national television coverage ended—to break a tie with his World Cup partner Dave Stockton and take the third round lead Saturday in the cold wet, $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Panthers nipped in OT

Chaffey College dropped an 84-77 decision to Palomar Saturday night in overtime on the Panthers' home court.

Palomar outscored Chaffey 18-11 in the overtime period to notch the victory. Palomar scored the first five points in the opening minutes of the overtime period.

Chaffey took a 38-36 lead with five minutes left in the first half after trailing most of the half. Chaffey built its lead to 40-36 before Palomar came back to tie the contest.

Tony Moran was the Panthers top scorer with 20 points. He also pulled down eight rebounds. Kevin Johnson, a transfer from UC Riverside, scored 19 points and had five steals Johnson was playing in his third game of the year for Chaffey.

Ford to face Arnie's Army

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

President Ford, an 18-handicapper, will team up with Arnold Palmer in the 36th annual Bing Crosby National Pro-Am which opens Thursday, Jan. 20 at Pebble Beach.

Ford, who will be just beginning life as an ex-president, will miss the first day in order to remain in Washington for inaugural ceremonies.

Mark McCormack, agent for Palmer, will play the first round with Palmer in Ford's place. Arnie and his Army have not appeared in the Crosby since 1973.

A field of 168 pros and 168 amateurs are paired for three rounds through Saturday, Jan. 22,and the low 30 teams play in Sunday's final at Pebble Beach. The Cypress Point and Monterey Peninsula courses will also be used for the first three days of play.

Two top women amateurs are in the field. They are Nancy Lopez of Roswell, N.M., Western Women's Amateur champ, and Marianne Bretton of San Diego, California state champion.

The January tournament will be played Saturday. The event gives golfers a chance to replay any two shots.

She was working as a commentator for ABC-TV when Marilyn Smith, her fellow announcer, said that some day Amy would qualify for the event. Without blinking an eye, Amy blurted, "I'll be here next year."

Well, next year is here, and the 20-year-old has fulfilled that promise and will compete in the Colgate Triple Crown at Mission Hills C.C. Jan. 14-15 along with nine other top women golf professionals for $50,000 in prize money.

Winners in the Glendora C.C. Christmas tournament Scramble have been announced. In first place with a 76 was the team of Mary Reed, Sue Lewis, June Cahan and Eleanor Baldauf. Second place went to Joan Shumaker, June Lambert, Cleo Jones, and Corky Booth.

Other teams in the top five were: third, Margie Kemby, Mabel Fazakerly, Merc Sitter and and Millie Weaver; fourth, Dena Hollett, Betty Ann Flint, Irene Campbell and Evelyn Atkins; fifth, Bev Galaher, Elsie Duffy, Lucille South and Anges Beavers.

Jack Spradlin says he has withdrawn a federal antitrust suit against the PGA for dropping him from membership in 1975.

The U.S. District Court in San Diego denied his appeal for an injunction last spring, and Spradlin is dropping the suit

He must qualify in competition should he choose to rejoin the Tour from which he was dropped for "failure to meet certain performance guidelines."

Big event for wives of San Dimas Canyon members is coming Feb. 19 when Las Vegas Night will be held. The date also marks a regular tournament and the first "Mixer" of the year for wives and husbands.

A little late but winners in the La Mancha Nassau event recently have been announced. They are: lst flight, Lucille Moore and Laseetta Hieb; 2nd flight, Margaret Mixon and Marge Franks; 3rd flight, Marie Downing and Marguerite Anderson.

Eighteen-hole winners are: lst flight, Bonnie Woodrow, Alta Hutchins; Vicki Raddi and Mae Extale in the 2nd flight; Madeline Maxwell won the 3rd flight.

Ed Paul of San Dimas Canyon is really shining on the greens these days. He recently received a gold-plated putter as a gift. "It's not only a beautiful putter," says Paul, "but I'm having no trouble knocking that ball in the hole now. It's perfect for my game." Or anybody else's for that matter!

Led by Keith Fergusof the U. of Houston, 29 golfers received their playing privileges on the PGA Tour for one year at the recent Fall Qualifying School in Brownsville, Texas.

Along with Fergus, 22, of Sugarland, Texas, four foreign players — Graham Marsh and Jack Newton of Australia, Vicente Fernandez of Argentina, and Alberto Rivadeneira of Colombia — were among the graduates.

It was evident that receiving a Tour card was important. One player, Larry Webb of Aurora, Colo., vowed that if he received his card, he would jump into the lake on the 18th hole. Following the final round when his card was assured, Webb leaped into the water to the cheers of other players.

Marcis aims for Western 500

RIVERSIDE — Dave Marcis of Skyland, N.C. has served notice that he is a serious threat to win the 1977 Winston Cup championship as he prepares here for the first race of the year, the Winston Western 500 on Sunday, Jan. 16.

Marcis, newly retained driver of the CAM-2 Mercury fielded by Roger Penske, arrives here in time to begin a private test of the car Thursday (Jan. 6) on the 2.62-mile road course.

Already Marcis has tested the car at Ontario Motor Speedway, Charlotte Motor Speedway and Daytona International Speedway, and he is high on his chances in the 30-race series dominated by the famed super speedways of the South.

Riverside has always been a troublesome event for Marcis, who has finished as high as fourth but has always encountered trouble sometime during the 500 or the Riverside 400 in June.

"My first trouble at Riverside," he reflected, "I was an independent and wasn't well equipped — either me or my equipment. We didn't know what the oiling requirements were, and I was burning up engines.

"When I went with K&K (Nord Krauskopf's Dodge, prepared by veteran crew chief Harry Hyde), I was getting better finishes, but I was still having troubles. We managed to finish well somehow in spite of them."

Last January, when Marcis finished eighth, and June, when he was 10th he was the only major driver without the benefit of disc brakes — an accessory that has meant the difference between winning and losing at Riverside since Mark Donohue in a Penske car proved the point in 1973.

Marcis' test program has concentrated on improving the engine, a weak point that proved so frustrating to his predecessor that driver Bobby Allison quit the team in the middle of the 500 at Ontario last November and established his own racing operation.

"We are looking for more speed own," Marcis said on the eve of his Riverside test. "The car handles beautifully."

Marcis reported that his parting with Hyde and Krauskopf was aimable. It was Hyde who originally gave him permission to test for Penske in Allison's place. Then, later, when Penske offered Dave the ride full time Marcis received the blessing of his former mechanic.

"Harry was well aware of what I was doing," the sixth ranked NASCAR Winston Cup driver explained. "I told him Roger made me a good offer, and Harry was the first person to encourage me to take it.

"In my dealings I kept everybody well informed. That way you don't have any hard feelings."

Marcis also served as a consultant for Hyde over the man to succeed him in the driver's seat of the Dodge that won three races last year and led 20 of the 30 races on the Winston Cup circuit.

The two names he recommended to Hyde — Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala. and Lenny Pond of Petersburg, VA. — are considered to be the leading candidates for the ride.

Tickets are on sale at all Ticketron Outlets, Wallich's Music City Stores and Liberty Agencies. Also at Riverside Race (714) 653-1161.

Local swimmer sets pool mark

JOHN MOFFET . . . . . sets swim mark

John Moffet, 12, once again proved to be the class of breaststrokers in his 11-12 age group as he set a pending national record at the 100 yard distance in a speedy 1:06.07. Young Moffet also swam a fast 1:00.68 for a pending SPAAAU record in the 100 yard individual medley (IM) and added three more first place medals in the 100 freestyle (54.06), 50 free (24.71) and 50 breaststroke (30.96), all personal best times. The Claremont youngster went on to garner seconds in the 200 IM (2:13.26), 500 free (5:20.59) and 200 free (1:57.71), the latter under the old SPAAAU record. Over the course of the two-day meet, Moffet was bested only by Mission Viejo's Vincente Vassallo, the number one 12-year-old in the nation.

Upland's 15-year-old Leila Fernandes wiped out the 15-18 girls handily as she took the gold in the 100 breast with a time of 1:12.16, her personal best. She completed her program with a 27.99 in the 50 free and a fourth place (2:43.43) in the 200 breaststroke.

Dave Oakes, 18, also from Upland, proved the best of the field as he aided th team effort with a victory in the 100 breast (1:02.62) in his only entry.

Jennifer Weck, 10, posted personal best times as she grabbed fourth place in the 100 back (1:18.04), fifth in the 100 IM (1:16.80), sixth in the 200 IM (2:49.75) and swam the 200 free in 2:28.45. The Upland lass went on to complete her entries with a fifth place effort of 36.90 in the 50 back.

Steve Weck, 9, clocked personal best times in three of his four events with 1:23.00 in the 100 back, 1:20.02 in the 100 IM and 1:34.22 in the 100 breast.

Fellow Uplander Chris Ryan, 10, also swam her personal best as she finished the 50 fly in 36.95.

Bettering their previous best in the meet were Claremonter Donna Sedgwick, 13, with a 2:34.94 in the 200 back and Uplander Barry Kimbrough, 11, with a 1:27.68 in the 100 breast.

BB's Jan. draft set to go Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The winter free-agent draft, protected by baseball's peculiar immunity from antitrust laws, begins Tuesday, with the prospect of the clubs finding good prospects very bleak.

"This is the worst January draft we've ever had," said one scout.

"We might pass on this one," said another scout. "I just don't see a single top name or even an advanced player."

"It's a real low quality draft," said a third scout. "There's no outstanding boy in the whole bunch."

The calendar always causes the January draft to be weaker than the June draft. High school seniors may have baseball on their minds in the winter, but they still do not graduate until June, when they become eligible for the summer selections.

And this group of January prospects is further weakened by baseball's college rule, which will have an affect on the draft for the first time. The college rule permits the signings of collegians who still have their senior years ahead of them, but those signings cannot be made unless it is between school years.

That leaves college dropouts and junior college players, none of whom has the scouts excited.

Pete Redfern was the No. 1 selection in last January's secondary phase, which is for athletes drafted in June but who did not sign. Redfern was quickly elevated from the minors to the majors, posting an 8-8 record with a 3.51 earned run average in 23 games for the Minnesota Twins in 1976.

Still, players will be drafted on the first round and beyond because major league teams often are optimistic and need players to fill their minor league rosters.

Weak draft or strong draft, it is a fair question to ask whether there should be any draft at all.

Banks repair losses

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bankers spent a quiet 1976 repairing some of the damage inflicted on their books by the loan losses and tight money conditions of the past few years.

Deposits flowed into banks at a good pace, interest rates steadied and profit margins, which made a dramatic comeback a year earlier, gradually widened.

The problems of defaulting or reduced-rate loans are far from over. But the growth of problem loans appeared to have peaked at the end of 1975, and banks in 1976 moved into a stronger position to cope with the billions of dollars in poor quality loans still in their portfolios.

Ninteen-seventy-six, according to one analyst, provided a "dose of tranquility" badly needed after the roller-coaster ride of the past few years. It was a year that gave banks the opportunity to set a smoother, more orderly course for the future.

Banks make money by accepting money from someone and lending it to someone else and for the past few years, both sides of that basic transaction have been troublesome.

During the recession, more borrowers than ever before were unable to meet the terms of their bank loans.

Loans lost because customers went bankrupt climbed to $3.8 billion in 1975, more than twice what they had ever amounted to in a single year before the recession.

Many borrowers trying to save their businesses worked out new low-interest or no-interest terms on their loans to carry them until the economy recovered.

Often these reduced-rate loans involved real estate operations, such as shopping centers, office buildings or apartment housing that stood half-built after the money ran out.

Banks also had problems finding the money to lend.

Deposits are the banks' chief source of lendable funds, but they were no longer as low-cost or as available to the bakns as they once were.

Costs of deposits rose sharply during the past few years due to the rising expenses of maintaining and staffing branch banks and providing checking services to their depositors.

And as booming loan demand created by inflation hit the banks in 1973-74, the shift of customers' money from savings accounts into higher paying bonds and deposits bills arrested the growth of deposits. In some banks, deposits declined.

For several years, banks had depended on money market funds to supplement their deposits. Usually, they borrowed certificates of deposit or Fed funds — borrowed bank reserves held at the Federal Reserve.

These funds became scarce and expensive. Som times, the return on loans was not covering the short-term costs of borrowed funds.

The strain toppled some banks and placed several hundred others, including Citibank and Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's second and third largest commercial banks respectively, on a special list of troubled banks compiled by the government regulators.

The problems of bad loans will be resolved slowly as borrowers work out their debts with banks. Final figures on 1976 loan losses will not be available until the middle of 1977, but the growth of bad loans probably peaked in 1975, many industry observers say.

The supply of funds can change more quickly than the quality of a loan portfolio. And it has done just that.

The savings deposits that fled banks to higher bond rates flowed back when rates fell. This year, savings deposits at commercial and savings banks rose sharply, sometimes to record levels.

For commercial banks, the margin between the 90-day prime rate loans and the cost of short-term funds to banks widened gradually in the third and fourth quarters. It helped put the banks in a stronger position to absorb the bad loans left on their banks.

A group of 25 commercial banks tracked by one Wall Street analyst showed third-quarter earnings for the group were 1 to 2 per cent ahead of the previous quarter and 5 per cent over the year before.

Bank capital, consisteing of retained earnings, stock and long-term bonds of the bank, was 8 per cent higher than the first half of 1975.

And cash resources had been replenished, with the drop in business loans this year more than made up for by increases in interest-bearing government bonds.

For the savings banks that make most of their loans as mortgages, single-family housing turned in a good year in 1976 and mortgage demand and earnings for the bank advanced strongly.

Businesss loan rates that are regularly adjusted to the short-term funds rate eased this year, with the basic prime rate falling to 6 to 6¼ per cent from 7¼ per cent.

Rates on consumer installment credit were mostly unchanged because the cost of providing retail services did not decline. However, the rise in deposits brought about other types of easier credit terms for customers.

For instance, the four-year car loan developed during the recession to lower monthly payments on more costly cars grew this year to 30 per cent of new auto loans. And $1,000 lines of ready credit became attached to more and more checking accounts.

Mortgage rates held steady at 8¼ to 9 per cent. But customers often were required to put less money down and were given more years to repay their mortgages.

Art works exhibition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The largest exhibition of the works of Robert Rauschenberg ever held is currently on display at the Smithsonian National Collection of Fine Arts. The exhibit contains approximately 150 works from the late 1940s to the present and includes some of his most famous works.

The exhibition will travel to the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, the Albright-Knox Art Gallery in Buffalo and the Art Institute of Chicago during 1977.

Market off to slow start

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market crossed up the optimists by opening 1977 with a sharp selloff this past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had climbed 54.10 points in the last four weeks of last year, dropped 21.52 to 983.13.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 2.45 to 105.01, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index was off 1.09 at 56.79.

The stage was set for the decline, analysts said, when bullish sentiment began to run higher and higher in December.

Investors recalled very clearly that the Dow had staged powerful rallies of 87 and 123 points in January of 1975 and 1976.

With the economic outlook brightening, the belief gained wide acceptance that the market would get off to another strong start this year.

Naturally, traders accumulated stock enthusiastically in the waning days of last year to be in position to benefit from an early-January advance.

But the problem was that few would-be buyers were left by yearend to make that New Year's advance happen.

That, in turn, prompted a scramble of profit taking that drove the average down nearly 12 points Tuesday and almost 10 on Wednesday.

The market was able to recoup about 5 points of its loss in the last two sessions of the week as some buyers moved in to hunt for bargains and close out previous short sales.

It was a quiet week for economic news. But late Friday investors got something to ponder over the weekend when President-elect Carter and leading Democrats from Congress set forth some details of their proposals for the economy.

Carter told reporters the plan called for a $30 billion combination of tax cuts and spend ing programs over the next two years.

Also looming in the immediate future were government figures on retail sales last month, due Monday, and the December wholesale price index, slated for Wednesday.

Housing stocks came under pressure after a brokerage house analyst issued a cautious report on the group's prospects.

National Semiconductor, trading at less than half its 1976 peak of 55⅜, gave ground when the company posted sharply lower quarterly earnings.

RCA moved ahead after the company sought approval to withdraw a planned offeriing of 5 million new shares.

The weekly tally of NYSE issues showed 989 gainers and 919 losers among the 2,129 traded.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.10 to 110.94.

LEWIS' HOMES EUCLID SERIES IN UPLAND

Euclid Series

'Sales' launched for Lewis homes

Sales are in progress at the third unit of Lewis Homes' new Euclid Series development, 1857 Euclid Avenue, Upland, it was announced.

"The Euclid Series represents the top of the Lewis line," is how building company vice president Roger G. Lewis described the aristocratically designed homes, now in various stages of construction.

The development's phase 3 unit comprises 23 single-family residences of one-story, two-story and split level design. They measure from 2,573 to 2,801 square feet of actual living area.

Equally impressive are such interior anemities as these. Each home has four or five bedrooms, 2½ or three baths and a three car garage.

Interior refinements in all models include ceramic tile entry foyers, formal dining rooms, wet bars, and guest powder rooms. Master bedroom suites have mirrored wardrobe doors and both a tub and a stall shower.

Each home commands a lot site of 15,000 square feet or more. Prices range from $86,000 to $95,000. Financing is on conventional terms.

Euclid Series homes are being constructed with refrigeratored air-conditioning systems. Kitchens will be equipped with built-in microwave ovens, hot water dispensers and trash compactors. There will also be the normal complement of kitchen appliances.

"We have designed the Euclid Series to be the style leader of its neighborhood, which is already known for its fashionable residences," Lewis said. He noted that the site's attractiveness, enriched by mountain views, and its location within the Upland School District are other appeals.

Financing for the project was supplied by Crocker Bank. Walker & Lee is the sales agent. May has been set as the tentative date for taking occupancy.

JOHN R. ROFFEIS

Alice Perryman as secretary, Glenda Garcia as treasurer and John Breck, Helen Castle, Jean Gutierrez and Pete Mariscal as directors.

The Hacienda Heights-Walnut Valley Board of Realtors was chartered Nov. 12, 1975.

Membership includes 116 Realtors, 402 Realtorassociates and 20 affiliates.

Murphy to join in state ceremony

Dean Murphy, newly-elected president of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, will be among those participating in next month's organizational and installation meeting of the California Association of Realtors.

The meeting will be held at the San Francisco Hilton Hotel beginning Thursday, Jan. 6, and continuing through Saturday.

Murphy will be installed as a state director of the 90,000-member association. Other state directors from this area to be installed are board treasurer David Legters, second vice president-elect Robert Miller, and 1976 president Mark Warren.

Thirty-two regional vice presidents and 1,300 state directors will be installed, among those Phil Gray of Covina, the regional vice president for this area.

On Jan. 7, Jerome Blank of Albany will be installed as the 70th president of CAR at an inaugural dinner-dance. Ceremonies will include installation of Don Weidmann of San Diego as first vice president; E. Thornton Ibbetson of Bellflower as treasurer for a sixth term; and Zan Beckstead of Chatsworth as executive vice president and state secretary for an eighth term.

Weidmann, as first vice president, will advance to the presidency in 1978, subject to election. A member of the San Diego Board of Realtors, Weidmann has been an active Realtor for 16 years. He operates his own general brokerage office in the Mission Bay area of San Diego.

Local Realtors earn committee spots

Four local Realtors, one Realtor Associate, the Board Attorney, and the Executive Officer from the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors have been appointed to statewide committees of the 90,000-member California Association of Realtors by Jerome Blank of Albany, CAR president. Announcement of the appointments was made by Dean Murphy, president of the local board.

District Representatives to committees include Mildred Heckmer, convention committee; David Legters, industrial-commercial committee; Robert Miller, HUD liaison committee; and 1976 President Mark Warren, public relations committee. Board attorney Thomas C. Brayton, 1977 President Dean Murphy, and Executive Officer Ella Ruby have been appointed members-at-large to the board legal affairs, board presidents, and executive officers committees respectively.

CAR committees work throughout the year on a wide range of projects to improve the service offered the public by the real estate industry and to encourage property ownership.

Hawkins women join sales club

Of the three top producer salesmasters of the past year in the Herbert Hawkins Realtors, the top two were women for the first time in the 30-year history of the company.

Peggy Allison, a sales associate in the Hawkins Arcadia North office, 44 East Foothill Boulevard, won top producer award and has been three years in the Million Dollar Club, two years a salesmaster. Allison has been with the Hawkins organization since mid-1974, and was not in business before that. Her work until then had been as homemaker and mother. Her husband, Chuck, also a salesmaster, and million dollar club member, is on the staff at the Arcadia office also.

Ruth Valentine of the second Arcadia office, at 11 West Duarte Road, and a sales associate with Herbert Hawkins since mid-1966, was announced as the Company's second top producer of the past year. Valentine has been two years a salesmaster and six years in the million dollar club.

The third top producer with the company is Del Olson, a member of the staff in the Hawkins West Covina office at 952 South Glendora. Olson has been with the company since mid-1975, and is two years a salesmaster and two years in the million dollar club of salesmen.

In addition to company bonuses, given at the annual Christmas party at the Convention Center in Pasadena this December, the top producers won trips for two to Hawaii, Mexico City and Puerta Vallarta respectively. Bonuses were received by 61 company associates as 1976 Salesmasters at the same time.

The Herbert Hawkins Realtors are launching on the 30th anniversary of the 75-office company. These are both owned and franchise offices, and are located throughout the Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego Counties. More franchises and owned offices are planned for the near future in these counties and in the San Jose area.

It is fitting that the beginning of the 30th anniversary year should be marked with women as top producers. Hawkins' mother, the late Florence Hawkins, was the originator and founder with her son of the company that has become the largest family-owned real estate firm in the Southern California area.

McElmurry honored

'Bound for Glory'

Guthrie spirit lives on

By STAN MIESES

"Bound For Glory," a motion picture based on the life of folk balladeer Woody Guthrie, has renewed interest in the life of one of the seminal forces behind modern American folk and protest song, and you know that can't be bad. Woody's message came from the heartland; he captured the American essence. Although he's been dead nearly 10 years, his spirit remains steadfast.

"There has always been a group of young, idealistic people who have kept Woody alive," says his widow, Marjorie Guthrie, who's also the mother of Arlo Guthrie. "This movie wasn't made just because someone at United Artists just thought the whole thing up. It's been a long-running project, ever since 'Bound For Glory' was published in 1943. There have been dozens of scripts, right from the beginning.

"There are so many people today, going around the country playing Woody's songs — you wouldn't believe how many of them have their own scripts. But this one, this one does have the essence of the man. People have asked me, 'Why doesn't it show his childhood, his marriage to me, his long suffering?' And I say, what's important here is the critical moment in everybody's life, when you say 'This is where I come from — this is where I'm going.'"

Still, Marjorie Guthrie had great apprehensions about the film. "When I think about what Hollywood could have done with the 'Life of Woody Guthrie;' it's fortunate it worked so well. I told them, 'I hope you make back all your money.' People have a sense of dignity about this film. Woody was a person, a man. I didn't want a hero, a Hollywood character. I shared some of the most intimate things Woody wrote to me with David Tarradine, who portrays Guthrie in the film) and Hal Ashby (the film's director). I felt this was the man."

And Carradine's interpretation? Was it close to the man? "I fortunately never saw Kung-Fu, so I had no preconceived ideas. My son Jody saw it first, and he told me, 'Ma, he has Woody's vibes.' You see, Woody was a man who poured out words in songs, LIVES AGAIN — The film, "Bound for Glory," has renewed interest in the life and music of folksinger Woody Guthrie. His widow, Marjorie, says of the film, "I felt this was the man."

but his real character, he was a one-syllable kind of guy. You got the message." Arlo is the only family member who hasn't seen the film, she reports.

On the heels of the film's release, comes the release of several records by and about Woody Guthrie's music. This too is a welcome addition. Warner Brothers is releasing two discs. The first is a double-record set, 'We Ain't Down Yet,' a live recording of a 1974 Tribute o Woody Guthrie Concert, featuring Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Pete Seeger, Odetta, and a host of others. The second is Woody himself singing his own songs. It was originally titled "Bound For Glory," but is now held up over a title hassle. Vanguard Records has always had "The Greatest of Woody Guthrie" available, and if you're a real fan and a collector, Folkways and the Library of Congress have Guthrie records of great merit.

Incidentally, Marjorie Guthrie is still working diligently towards finding a way to understand Huntington's Disease, the illness that institutionalized her husband for fifteen years before it killed him. Remarking about the sensitive scene in "Alice's Restaurant," in which Woody Guthrie is portrayed briefly, dying, Marjorie sadly notes: "I only wish Woody did have a private room and a private nurse in a beautiful hospital like they showed. The truth is, he was in a ward with 44 other men, all mental patients. We did everything wrong. We didn't understand the disease. Families like ours need friends."

To that end, there is a Woody Guthrie Foundation, which oversees Woody Guthrie Publications. The money they receive from book and record sales goes towards the fight against Huntington's disease and other chronic neurological diseases. Their address is 250 West 57 Street, New York, N.Y. 10009 .

On your toes dept.: No rock and roller should count out the Joffrey Ballet. They put on a show that makes music come alive. Their recent opening in New York of "Petrouchka" and "Pineapple Poll" was a rousing success. Stravinsky's light score (available in a new recording on London Records) is set to a charming fantasy about a mannequin love triangle that's beautifully costumed, and performed with gusto. "Pineapple Poll," is a swiftly and gracefully choreographed knockout. The Joffrey also has in its repertoire the much-acclaimed Twyla Tharp ballet, "Deuce Coupe," set to the music of the Beach Boys and other 1960s hits. This company is not to be missed. They'll be in Chicago for two weeks beginning in February.

Right food

Today, more and more, we hear and read about the importance of a balanced diet. But what is a balanced diet? What does it mean? One prominent nutritionist has said it means eating the right goods in the right amounts for health. Another says it's an "adequate diet." What it seems to boil down to is eating foods each day that provide adequate amounts of all the nutrients needed for health.

Grip and Bono vows exchanged

Miss Karen Marie Bono of La Verne and Bruce Charles Grip of Upland were married in the Lincoln Avenue Reformed Church in Pomona. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bono of La Verne and the son of Robert C. Grip and the late Mrs. Grip were married in a double-ring afternoon ceremony by the Rev. Donald Brandt.

Honor attendant was Mrs. Jacqueline Dixon, sister of the bride, of Logan, Utah. Bridesmaids were Miss Wendy Woodruff of Pomona, Miss Margaret Moynihan of La Palma and Miss Gail Zwart of Upland.

Standing as best man was Mark Grip, brother of the groom, of La Verne. Ushers were Kevin Grip of La Verne, Craig Travis of Ontario, Jerry Keys of Rowland Heights and Richard Katze of Pomona. Flower girl was Holly Rapp and ring bearer was Roger Watkins.

Following the rites, a reception was held at the Diamond Bar Country Club.

The newlyweds traveled through California and are now at home in Upland.

MRS. BRUCE GRIP

Joyce Brothers
Life in dormitory

Dear Dr. Brothers: My husband thinks there's something wrong with our 17-year-old because she chose to live at home instead of in a co-ed dorm at college. He's been pushing her into sex, against my wishes, ever since she was 15 and I think she's simply had it. Middle-aged men, including my husband, place too much emphasis on sex. I wish he'd leave her alone. What can I do? — J.S.

Dear J.S.: Try to explain to your husband that during this sensitive period fathers of young girls should follow the old advice given children and be seen and not heard. This is a time when sons and daughters need privacy, when interference from parents in sexual matters, such as the sharing of sexual intimacies or sexual jokes, can be damaging.

Ira Mintz, a child psychoanalyst, reports that many young people who are not ready for sex feel pressured by their parents and by society, and if they don't embrace the new sexual freedom, they worry and feel something must be wrong with them.

For students away from home, he says, there's often no place to hide, no curfew behind which to take refuge, no parental rule that can be invoked without losing face. Your daughter may have chosen to stay at home because she knew she needed this additional security. I suggest you offer this help and not question her. After all she is only 17.

Dear Dr. Brothers: My husband has been promoted almost every two years in the past 10 years. This usually means a move to a new town, and a new school for our children. The older ones are used to it now, but my 10-year-old son is rebelling. Obviously, I can't leave him behind. Are these changes harmful and is there anything I can do to help him? — K.P.

Dear K.P.: Studies indicate that frequent moves do create stress for youngsters and it's hardest on children between the ages of 6 and 11. Children in that age group are particularly vulnerable to any upheaval in their environment, and there is usually a marked decrease in school capabilities. Moving tends to hurt their ability to cope in a school environment. It often lowers their general ability to think and to react intelligently. This doesn't last forever, however, but it does show that children in such mobile situation need special help.

Psychologist Joseph Schaller found that moving to new schools is toughest on the more economically advantaged. As for school work, frequent moves seem to be harder on the brighter children, while those of lower intelligence often benefit from the moves. He also found that in long distance moves, children tended to remain more attached to the old school than those who didn't go so far.

Despite these drawbacks, if your children have the support they need at home, they may profit from this series of new experiences. Stress the fact that making new friends doesn't mean losing old ones. Help your youngster write to his friends so he'll have a sense of continuity. If possible, invite them to visit and let your son visit them.

FUN FACTS
from WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

CONTRARY TO MYTH, MEDIEVAL SUITS OF ARMOR ONLY AVERAGED BETWEEN 50 TO 60 LBS. AND THEY WERE SO WELL FITTED, THE WEARER COULD MOVE ABOUT EASILY.

CATTLE BRANDING IN THE U.S. DID NOT ORIGINATE IN THE WEST BUT IN CONNECTICUT. IN 1644, LEGISLATION REQUIRED CATTLE AND SWINE BE MARKED AND REGISTERED.

NOBODY KNOWS JUST WHEN MARBLES BEGAN, BUT HISTORY INDICATES THE GAME WAS PLAYED BY CHILDREN OF ANCIENT EGYPT AND ROME.

JACKSONVILLE 827 SQ. MI.

THE LARGEST U.S. CITY IN AREA IS NOT LOS ANGELES AT 458.2 SQUARE MILES, BUT JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA WHICH COVERS 827 SQUARE MILES.

"CONGRATULATIONS, YOUNG MAN! WELCOME TO THE FAMILY SALARY POOL!"

"I HAVEN'T DECIDED WHAT WE'LL HAVE FOR DINNER . . . YOU'D BETTER PLAY SAFE AND NOT EAT LUNCH!"

"I WONDER IF ONE CAN'T TAKE TOO MANY OF THESE POTENT NEW DRUGS! I DON'T HAVE NEARLY THE SYMPTOMS I USED TO!"

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Often cinnamon roll dough is hard to roll up if it is soft. I take the backside of a pancake turner and push it under the dough to make the rolling easier. — MRS. C.S.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for avid snapshot collectors. I now file my pictures in a drawer (a big box would do nicely, too). I store them in the envelopes they come in and on the outside write the subject, the date taken and any other information that will help identify them. — MRS. R. C.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — My son's hands were really greasy after he worked on the car. I poured hair shampoo on them, he worked it in real good, wiped it off with a paper towel and all the grease came off. This also works wonders on greasy clothes. — MARY M.

DEAR POLLY — My sewing hint is to not make notches when cutting out a garment, particularly in the upper part where the seams might be weakened. I apply small bits of masking tape where the notches should be. They are easily removed when the garment is finished. — VERNA.

DEAR POLLY — As a gift for each of my children I bought magnetic photo albums and used one page for pictures taken each month from birth to a first birthday. This also helps mother to remember when the baby first sat up, walked and so on. — MRS. M.F.

DEAR POLLY — If you need a large lid for a frying pan that is 11 inches or more across, substitute your pizza pan for a lid, to prevent splattering of grease and to eliminate having to buy a large lid. — F.M.H.

DEAR POLLY — I have a simple remedy for those slight superficial burns one often gets while cooking. I quickly apply white flour to the spot and this works very fast for me. — MRS. W.N.

DEAR POLLY — When hemming slacks or dresses I first pin in the hem with the pins on top and then, as I hand-stitch the hems, the thread does not get caught on the pin heads or points. — N.C.

DEAR POLLY — My grandmother often goes out with us in the evening and when we arrive back at her home it is so dark that finding her house key used to be a problem. Now she has put a baggie tie on it and locates it easily. — BOBBY.

FICTION & FACT: WONDER WOMEN

It's no idle compliment to say that Lynda Carter, star of The New Original Wonder Woman, (airing periodically on ABC) is one of the most beautiful women in the world. It's a fact confirmed by a succession of beauty titles including Miss World U.S.A. in 1973. The willowy, dark haired beauty from Phoenix, Arizona, has a penchant for being in the right place at the right time, a gift which landed her the coveted role in the re-creation of Charles Moulton's world-famous comic book character Wonder Woman.

Physically, Lynda is truly a Wonder Woman. She is a strikingly fresh beauty with large, soft eyes that run to blue, green and gray, depending on the colors around her. She stands 5'8¼ tall in her stocking feet and weighs a slender 126 pounds. Lynda has all the instincts of a natural athlete and is superbly coordinated, having studied at the London School of Ballet off and on for 10 years.

After touring for three years as a vocalist, Lynda paused between engagements in her home. Just to pass the time, she entered her first beauty competition in that city's participating pageant of the international Miss World contest. In one short month, she'd won the city title, the subsequent Miss Arizona contest and finally became Miss World U.S.A. She was then sent to London where she placed in the finals and was proclaimed one of the most beautiful girls in the world.

Madlyn Rhue, who stars as Hilary Madison in Executive Suite (Fridays at 10PM on CBS), was born on October 3 in Washington D.C., and became starstruck from going to movies as a child—she pictured herself as someday stopping traffic in glamorous white satin and white fox. She attended high school and City College in Los Angeles and began acting in summer stock. She moved to New York where she got her first professional job as a dancer at the Latin Quarter. She also studied drama and appeared in "The Best Laid Plans" on Broadway. When she returned to Los Angeles, she appeared in "Two for the Seesaw" at the Civic Playhouse. That led to work in such television shows as Riverboat, Sugarfoot, M Squad and The Untouchables.

She had a regular role on the Bracken's World television series and has appeared in many major television dramas. Miss Rhue says she'll try anything once, and as proof cites things she's done (but would never do again), like skydiving, taking a harrowing flight with the Blue Angels aerobatic team, going down in a submarine, and riding around a car racetrack at 130 m.p.h. "Nothing frightens me the first time," she says.

COVER CLOSE-UP

'FLYING HIGH'

McLean Stevenson, the highly irregular Army colonel who was literally shot down some seasons back to the voluble consternation of millions of M*A*S*H viewers, is flying high in his new comedy series. "I think it's a great series because it's honest," said the star of The McLean Stevenson Show, which airs at 8:30PM Wednesdays on NBC.

"The comedy grows naturally out of situations that are real; the sort of things that could happen to you or to somebody you know."

Stevenson's first regular series exposure was on The Doris Day Show, in which he played Miss Day's boss for two seasons. "This isn't like the Doris Day Show, where the viewer was presented with a widow who never cried or went to the bathroom but ran around in expensive automobiles and a $20,000 wardrobe," he pointed out.

Later Stevenson spent three years as the popular Lt. Col. Henry Blake on M*A*S*H. When he opted out of the role, agile writer promptly penned a scene in which the colonel's plane was shot down in flames. "It's a pretty effective way to get rid of a character," Stevenson said with a grin.

Since then, Stevenson has made something of a series out of guesting and host-guesting on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson. And, last season, he headlined a one-hour variety special with a now-familiar title, The McLean Stevenson Show.

In his new series, a half-hour family situation comedy, McLean plays Mac Ferguson, a hardworking hardware store proprietor who is sorely taxed when it looks like all the Ferguson's in the world—plus a few casual friends—have decided to live at his house.

"The series actually deals with four generations of Americans, from my wife's mother at one end to my daughter's children underfoot, and they all live at my place," Stevenson said. "It's quite a strain on the plumbing," he added.

The generation span embraces Mac and wife Peggy (Barbara Stuart), Grandma (Madge West), daughter Janet (Ayn Ruymen), son Chris (Steve Nevil) and Janet's two children, David (David Hollander) and Jason (Jason Whitney).

"Janet was away for several years, living with her husband, but then she got divorced and came home with the kids," McLean explained. "We like having her back and all, but Mac can't quite get used to being called Grandpa."

Mac's wife Peggy, is open, free, friendly and bubbly. She has some very positive attitudes toward life, and is studying law on a part-time basis. Grandma is vital and vinegarish, with a waspish tongue which finds its target more often than not in the general area of Mac. She's been living with her daughter and son-in-law for seven years.

Son Chris is the free soul of the Ferguson family. He's a part-time college student, lives in the basement, and his numerous girl-friends wear an ever-deepening path across the living room carpeting.

"That basement living really gets Mac's goat," Stevenson said with a grin. "After all, there's a perfectly good bedroom available upstairs, and God knows what's going on down there in the basement."

The continuing cast on the show is as diversified, experience-wise, as the characters they portray.

Barbara Stuart has previously starred or co-starred in several series, playing the role of "Bunny" on Gomer Pyle for five years and has guested on more that 100 other comedy and dramatic programs.

Ayn Ruymen, who plays daughter Janet, has appeared in many television movies, including "Liza's Pioneer Diary," and "Hurricane." She has guested on such series as Baretta and Police Story.

Madge West, the waspish Grandma, has appeared on numerous television shows. Her film credits include "The Miracle Worker," and "For the Love of Ivy."

The role of Mac's son Chris is the first professional television exposure for Steve Nevil. He previously studied acting in NewYork and at U.C.L.A. and worked in repertory theater.

McLean makes no bones about it: He likes the title of his new series. "I never could stand being called Henry," he said, harking back to his M*A*S*H role.

Laugh-In, the multi-Emmy-winning NBC series that revolutionized comedy-variety programming, will return to NBC as a series of six new specials starting next fall. George Schlatter, who served as executive producer and producer of the original Laugh-In—which premiered as an NBC special Sept. 9, 1967, and then as a long-running series, Jan. 22, 1968—will be at the helm of the six specials.

Schlatter said he is starting at once to put together a new resident company of players as a nucleus of the new show. Each special will be hosted by different stars, will feature guest stars and celebrities from all fields, and will introduce new talent. Schlatter also revealed that some of the original Laugh-In features, such as the news segment and the cocktail party, will be brought back. "But most of the show will consist of new people, features and and departments in an irreverent, outrageous satirical revue," he said.

Following its 1968 premiere as a series, Laugh-In was an overnight rating success, and consistently remained a top-rated regular series for most of its years on the network. The series also was a hit with TV audiences in England, Australia and Canada. With its fast-paced short topical sketches, rapid-fire sight gags, the machine-gun burst of one-liners and quick blackouts, Laugh-In was credited with changing the face and pace of the TV variety show format.

But the series was responsible for much more. It introduced into American speech such popular expressions as "Sock it to me," "Verrry interesting," "Here come de judge," "You bet your sweet bippy," "Look that up in your Funk and Wagnalls," and "Beautiful downtown Burbank." Laugh-In also served as the springboard for the careers of Goldie Hawn, Lily Tomlin, Henry Gibson, Arte Johnson, Ruth Buzzi, Gary Owens, Jo Anne Worley and others.

The show's weekly "Flying Fickle Finger of Fate Award" put a national spotlight on foul-ups across the nation, and often resulted in corrective measures being taken.

Laugh-In added a new dimension to TV comedy with the ingenious use of the star as cameo guest, and also consistently showcased notables performing out of character. All of these accomplishments and innovations earned Laugh-In 127 Emmy nominations and 27 Emmys, as well as numerousother awards from the Golden Globes, the Writer's Guild, Director's Guild and Producer's Guild.

Barbara Walters—co-anchor of the ABC Evening News With Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters—has been named "Woman of the Year" in a poll of the broadcast clients of United Press International. The election of Jimmy Carter was chosen "Story of the Year" and the President-Elect was designated "Man of the Year."

Ms. Walters edged out Mrs. Betty Ford in the balloting, which was conducted among the 3,850 subscribers to the UPI audio service.

Ms. Walters has earned a series of honors, including, "Broadcaster of the Year," awarded by the International Radio and Television Society in 1975, and an Emmy the same year from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. She was named "Today's Woman" in a Newsweek cover story in 1974 and listed by Time magazine among the 100 most influential leaders in America.

She became the first woman to co-anchor a network news program regularly after she joined ABC News is September, 1976. Early in her career she was a writer for CBS Television Network new broadcasts and later became the youngest woman producer at WNBC-TV. Joining the Today program in 1961 as a writer, she became a reporter-at-large within a year and co-host in 1974.

Ms. Walters was a member of the NBC news teams that went to the People's Republic of China to cover the visits of President Nixon in 1972 and President Ford in 1975. She also accompanied Senator George McGovern in 1975 on a four-day trip to Cuba where she talked with Premier Castro.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR F. LEE BAILEY, attorney

What are your views on capital punishment?—A.G., Columbus, Miss.

● I believe capital punishment to be an appropriate remedy for anyone who does me injury, but under no other circumstances. Seriously, for countless years and in countless cultures, capital punishment has been tried again and again with no apparent beneficial results. My principal opposition lies in the fact that all legal expertise is often far too inaccurate to warrant betting a human life on a jury's verdict—or a judge's, for that matter.

FOR LILLIAN CARTER

How do you keep so alert and active? Do you follow a special diet?—Lisa Guerry, Horseheads, N.Y.

● Not at all. The diet I like best—and the one I always follow—is eating any and all the foods I like. Of course, I also try to get as much exercise as possible, especially through walking.

FOR JIMMY WALKER, star of Good Times

You claim you're a lady's man. What do women find so irresistible about you?—L.P., Tampa, Fla.

● My relationships are very fulfilling because I give a lot. That's why women always come back to me. All my girl friends come over and cook, wash and iron for me, but they do these things because they want to, not because I ask them to. I treat women like women, not like slaves.

FOR IRVING WALLACE, author of The R Document

What's your advice to someone who hopes to become a successful writer?—M.H., Medford, Ore.

● The big thing for a budding novelist is, of course, to write, and I think the best way to do that is to keep a daily journal or diary, which I did for years. Also, read writers you admire and enjoy, not those that scare or confuse you. Then forget everything and start writing.

FOR PHYLLIS GEORGE, sportscaster

I know you're not a leader in the women's liberation movement, but do you think the movement has helped you in particular and women in general?—Marilyn Mangas, Harrington Park, N.J.

● Yes. For instance, women know now they don't have to get married immediately after graduation and then have a baby right away. They can have a career, too. I plan to get married some day and have children, but I like knowing I'll be able to work if I choose.

FOR DEBBIE REYNOLDS

What gave your career its biggest boost?—M.W., Middletown, Ohio

● A very cheap bathing suit, which I bought at the age of 14 (having saved for it from my salesgirl pay at fifty cents an hour) to wear at the Miss Burbank Beauty Contest. I won, and that led to my Warner Bros. contract.

FOR SEN. RICHARD S. SCHWEIKER (R-Pa.)

Truthfully, what made you team with Ronald Reagan for the GOP's nomination?—A. Kravitz, St. Louis, Mo.

● My desire to see a broadly based Republican Party. Too often our moderate and conservative wings have been at odds, instead of trying to bridge the ideological gap to build a coalition that can win elections. So when Gov. Reagan said ours would be an inclusive party, not an exclusive one, I accepted.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Who's the country's oldest registered voter?—R.M., Washington, D.C.

● It could be Mrs. Mrika Mrnacaj, 112, who came here in 1972 as an Albanian refugee and became a citizen just last year. Her age entitled her to vote by absentee ballot this past election, but she insisted on doing so in person, fearing she might not be around for another chance next time. She was excited at casting a "free" vote and could not understand how anyone (meaning nonvoters) could pass up such an opportunity.

FOR DIANA VON WELANETZ,
author of The Pleasure of Your Company

What's the first rule to follow in entertaining?—Steve Arbuckle, Southbury, Conn.

● Remember that you "eat" with your eyes first! Make sure the table is attractive and don't be afraid of color, in setting as well as in preparation. For instance, when I fix my favorite Island Curry recipe, I serve it in a hollow pineapple boat with daisies woven into the fronts of the fruit.

PRO AND CON

Where Should the Super Bowl Be Played?

Should it be played at a neutral, warm-weather site, or in the home city of one of the teams?

PRO Pete Rozelle, Commissioner, National Football League

By playing the Super Bowl at a warm-weather site, hopefully a neutral one, we create evenly competitive conditions for both teams. I don't think any of the participants in the Super Bowl's 10-year history would say the game has been decided either by setting (home-field advantage) or by weather. Also remember—every game since the first one has been a sellout. Let's face it, the Super Bowl is more than a game, and the festivities before the game make a warm-weather, large-stadium city attractive to those who return each year.

CON Fran Tarkenton, quarterback, Minnesota Vikings

The site should alternate between the American Conference city and the National Conference city. True, the home team would have an edge, but it would only be slight. The Super Bowl is the only championship in major sports played at a neutral site, and you miss the enthusiasm of the home-town fans. The trouble is a lot of people are there simply for the party aspect. I realize the NFL wants to have the game at a warm-weather site, but some of pro football's most unforgettable championship games have been played in freezing weather.

David Farrell

THE 101 FACETS OF THE REAL PETER SELLERS

Lover, workhorse, professional photographer, father—would you believe he's patterned his life after Winston Churchill?

By Peer Oppenheimer

"Mr. Sellers, I am Peer Oppenheimer from FAMILY WEEKLY, and I would like . . ."

"We're very busy right now. We expect an air raid at any moment. Dreadfully sorry."

Bang, the receiver came down.

When Peter was in Germany recently on location for his new film, The Pink Panther Strikes Again, I thought I'd stop by to carry on our unfinished chat and to find out how this peripatetic individual could put up with being bumbling Inspector Clouseau for a fourth time. It was an intriguing quest since Peter has lived an actor's dream: he's played 47 wildly different characters in his film career.

I caught up with Peter at the hotel where he—as Inspector Clouseau—had just narrowly escaped death when a dwarf carrying a huge pretzel inadvertently walked between him and the would-be assassin's knife blade.

My first question was to the point: did he enjoy playing Inspector Clouseau so much that he was willing to repeat the role four times, something he'd never done before?

Peter smiled ruefully. "It's beginning to wear off a bit," he admitted, "but it's still fun."

Peter has been in on Clouseau's rather warped development ever since its inception. "Actually, it happened in the back of a car in Rome, driving from the airport to a hotel when we did the first Pink Panther. Blake Edwards, director and co-writer of The Pink Panther films, and I sort of threw ideas around of what Clouseau should be like. It's like painting on paper."

Since Peter is never content with his creations, he kept working on Clouseau to expand the character. "He's still the same, but not totally," Sellers explained. "His eccentricity has changed somewhat, and he also speaks differently. I've found new ways with both English and French pronunciations."

Contrary to many working situations on a film in which creative minds clash because of ego problems, Sellers and Edwards get along well, and Blake has never seemed to mind Peter's fooling around with the scripts to give Clouseau added hilarity. "On the contrary," Peter said, "I think a good director would want to know how an actor feels about his lines. I've been writing my own dialogue since the old radio days."

The old radio days take Peter back to the beginnings of his acting career. Born into a show-business family on September 8, 1925, in Southsea, Hampshire, England, Peter was bitten by show biz while still in the cradle. Not only were his parents involved, but eight of his uncles were stage producers, and his grandmother, Ma Sellers, introduced revues to Britain at the turn of the century. "I was in the theater by the time I was 13," he told me. "I started sweeping up—with a broom. I made ten cents a week."

Typically, Peter turned his Royal Air Force assignment in India into an entertainment tour of the Far East as a member of Ralph Reader's Gang Show. When he was back in civilian garb, he talked himself onto the boards of London's Windmill Theatre, and because he had an uncanny knack of impersonating anything from animals to statesmen, he pretended to be two other people—established stars—and recommended himself for a job with the BBC radio. His versatile voice also got him into films when John Huston needed someone to do Humphrey Bogart's voice for additional dialogue in Beat the Devil. Next, he did the offscreen voice of Winston Churchill in The Man Who Never Was. ("I have patterned my whole life after Sir Winston Churchill," Peter told me with a perfectly straight face.) The public finally saw Sellers when he played Alec Guinness' Teddy Boy aide in The Ladykillers. But his favorite roll of all was Dr. Strangelove.

There is, I learned, a serious side to Peter Sellers, a side he seldom shows to the public because, quite frankly, he is a very private person. "I don't like to talk about myself. I think people are more interested in what I do on the screen than how I live away from it."

Sellers' serious side showed up when he got married—three times. "I'd rather not talk about it," he said. His first wife was actress Anne Howe, who is the mother of two of his children, Michael and Sarah. His second wife, Britt Ekland, also an actress, gave him Victoria. His third wife was Miranda Quarry. In between and, in some cases, during these unions, he's made headlines because of reported romances with women like Sophia Loren, Liza Minnelli and, recently, Julie Ege, actress Lynne Frederick and model Titti Wachtmeister.

"I am a romanticist," said 51-year-old Peter. The word was out that by now Sellers knew what he wanted and that he was on the lookout for the perfect wife. "Nonsense," said Peter. "In my opinion, the requirements for a perfect wife are an imperfect woman. And it is not true that I have to be in love in order to do my best work. I am too professional for that. When I am working, I concentrate on what I am doing 100 percent. Besides, I believe work cures all ills."

Peter takes his fatherhood quite seriously: "We are a very close-knit family. My two elder children are in London. Michael, 22, is studying Egyptology. Sarah is 18 and is in art school. She wants to be a photographer. I am a professional photographer, you know. I have had three covers on Vogue alone, but I get very touchy if people want to buy my pictures because I am Peter Sellers. That's why my credit is always so small. I want to sell them because the pictures are good, because I am a good photographer." His youngest daughter Victoria is 11 and attends school in Los Angeles.

Home, to Peter, is "wherever I work, and that's all over the world. But I do have a flat in London, which is probably the closest to what I call home. Many English actors have left because of high taxes, but I have stayed because I love my country and everything it stands for."

What makes him lose his temper? "Getting annoyed." And what annoys him? "For one thing, invasion of my privacy!" He glared at me. "People expect me to be funny in everyday life, but my sense of humor shows only on stage. When I am not funnny at a party, people usually pick up pieces of furniture and hurl them at me and pour unfinished soup over me. In my work, I am annoyed by the class system. I prefer to eat with the crew and stay at the same hotels with them when we are on locations. I get very upset when I am put up elsewhere."

When I prepared to say good-bye to Peter—ex-husband, father, actor, photographer, humorist with a very serious side—I hoped for one more profound quote, so I asked, "Tell me, honestly, Peter, what changes would you make if you could live your life over again?"

There was a long dramatic pause. "I'd use more makeup."

A Limited Edition Collection.
Available by Advance Subscription Only.
Limit: One subscription per person.
Subscriptions close: February 22, 1977.

The complete collection honoring The Presidents of the United States will be handsomely displayed in a luxurious album provided to collectors at no additional cost.

From the time of George Washington, the Presidency of the United States has been a place for a brave heart and a strong spirit. An office of awesome responsibility. For the President is defender of the Constitution and guardian of the ideals first proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence.

The thirty-seven men who have shouldered this burden have been ordinary people, called by their countrymen to be shapers of America's destiny. Each the hope of future generations. The holder of what has become the most powerful office on earth.

Some strong and truly titans of their times, some weak; some movers of history, others swept by its tide; their story — the history of the Presidency — is the heritage of every American.

An official commemorative collection.

Now, on the eve of the inaugural of the first President of America's third century as a Nation, it is fitting for us to remember — and to honor — those men who, far surpassing even the most optimistic dreams of our Founding Fathers, have made the White House the focus of our history. The citadel of our freedom. The living symbol of America to us and to all the world.

To do so, in a lasting and significant way, The White House Historical Association — dedicated to enhancing every citizen's appreciation of the White House — has authorized the renowned Fleetwood Company to issue a collection of thirty-eight engraved Philatelic Commemorative Covers individually honoring all of The Presidents of the United States.

This is the first and only such collection ever to be authorized by the White House Historical Association and will be extraordinary in every respect.

A dignified and worthy tribute.

Historically accurate to the smallest detail, each Cover will focus on one President. Superbly produced on luxurious laid-fiber paper — the traditional paper of our Nation — each will be vividly cacheted with the President's portrait from the Official White House Collection. Masterpieces by such greats as Gilbert Stuart, Rembrandt Peale, Samuel F. B. Morse, they capture each President's character and vision with uncommon sensitivity.

Moreover, they will be handsomely engraved with the Presidents' signatures. Signatures that have been written with firm and determined hands in testament to the aspirations of a whole Nation; in witness to the great turning points of our history. Abraham Lincoln's, which freed the slaves. Thomas Jefferson's, which doubled the Nation's size. Theodore Roosevelt's that busted the trusts. And John F. Kennedy's that set America on course for the moon.

Appropriately, each will be officially issued and postmarked during 1977 on the exact anniversary of the President's birth at the place where he was born. Places now enshrined in our history.

The complete collection will be a dignified and worthy tribute to the lives, the times, and the achievements of our Presidents. From the youngest, John F. Kennedy, to the oldest, William H. Harrison, they are men who have had unshakable faith in America and its future, in its people and in its principles. Men who became part of our proud heritage as The Presidents of the United States.

One single, strictly limited edition.

The Presidents of the United States will be issued in a single, strictly limited edition. And the total number will be forever limited to the exact number of original subscriptions postmarked not later than February 22, 1977, with a limit of one collection per subscriber.

To assure the authenticity of this limited edition, each Cover will bear the imprimatur of the White House Historical Association and the distinctive hallmark of The Fleetwood Company — recognized since 1929 as America's foremost purveyor of Philatelic Commemorative Covers — which has been authorized by the White House Historical Association to produce the complete collection.

Handsome Collector's Album included.

Collectors who take advantage of this opportunity to acquire The Presidents of the United States will also receive, without additional cost, a handsomely bound collector's album. With narrative by historian David C. Whitney — one of America's most prominent authorities on the Presidency — this lavish, over 200-page album will bring each President and his times into vivid perspective. Privately prepared exclusively for individual subscribers to this collection, it will be a truly impressive addition to your library and a superb way of appreciating and protecting this most significant collection.

Convenient plan of acquisition.

Subscribers to The Presidents of the United States will receive issues at the convenient rate of three per month, beginning in late February, 1977, and concluding in January, 1978, with five issues. The original issue price of $2.50 per Cover ($7.50 per month) will be guaranteed for the entire collection. And to ensure the highest standards, each shipment will be delivered, unblemished by addressing, in a protective package. The album, provided at no additional cost, will be shipped in August, 1977.

Subscription Deadline: February 22, 1977.

An Official Collection and one of historic importance to all Americans, The Presidents of the United States is certain to become a highly prized and admired collection in future years. One that will in a real sense be inspiration and pleasure for you to own; and an heirloom your children and their children will appreciate in years to come.

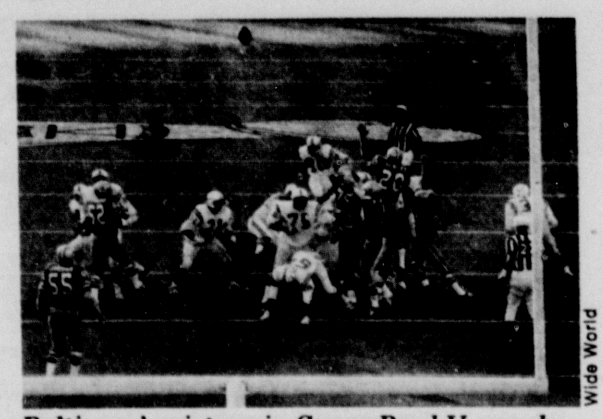
BEHIND THE SCENES AT THE SUPER BOWL

Why is it that the most important game of the season, between the two best teams in pro football, so often does not measure up to our expectations?



Wide World

Focus on Sports

Green Bay versus Kansas City in Super Bowl I "offered the titillation of being a first," but the game was one-sided.

By Larry Merchant

You get an invitation to the party of the year. You think about it and plan for it for weeks, psych yourself for days, preen for hours. Then, you finally get there, and in a few minutes you feel like soggy air hissing out of the balloon your imagination had blown up.

The Super Bowl is like that. The Super Bowl is a rainbow of anticipation that meets a pot of gold on national television. It's the biggest one-shot spectacular in America. It generates enormous interest and enormous revenue. But, in the end, more often than not, it's one big anticlimactic balloon.

Why? Why does the Super Bowl usually deliver less than it promises while the World Series usually delivers more? Why are there four or five more exciting football games every Sunday of the season than the one that is supposed to be Super?

There are reasons, reasons that go to the heart of sport in general and football in particular.

But before we get into the reasons, you have to have a history of the Super Bowl—mercifully compressed.

Wide World

Super Bowl III with Joe Namath: the only one "that really grabbed folks."

The first Super Bowl offered the titillation of being a first. It matched the champions of the old established National Football League, the Green Bay Packers, with the champions of the upstart American Football League, the Kansas City Chiefs. The game was one-sided.

The third Super Bowl was the only one of the 10 that really grabbed folks and shook them. That was the Joe Namath Super Bowl, when the New York Jets upset the Baltimore Colts, standing the pro pigskin on end.

The fifth Super Bowl was competitive, unlike all the others, the Colts beating the Dallas Cowboys on a last-play field goal. But it was roundly mocked as an artistic flop—there were 11 fumbles and interceptions.

In six of the other seven Super Bowls the team that scored first won, doing it while millions yawned from coast to coast and border to border.

Some party. So now we'll get to the reasons why.

First, the truly theatrical contest is the exception rather than the rule in all sports. The most common scenario has one team or one player gradually assert dominance and go on to win.

Second, what makes the unexceptional entertaining is individual performance or dynamic personalities, and football usually smothers individuality. The Joe Namath Super Bowl is an exception that proves the rule; except for Namath, the game was no more exciting than other Super Bowls. Now consider recent World Series involving the Oakland Athletics and/or Cincinnati Reds with such clearly defined stars as Pete Rose, Catfish Hunter, Reggie Jackson, Joe Morgan, Johnny Bench.

Third, the surest way to survive six exhibition games, 14 regular-season games and two playoff games, which is how teams qualify for the Super Bowl, is to play resourceful, defensive-minded football. The result is that the game turns into a tug of war. (Fortunately, this equation may be changing. More offensive-minded teams—the Baltimore Colts, Oakland Raiders, Cincinnati Bengals, New England Patriots, St. Louis Cardinals, Minnesota Vikings, et al—have become playoff contenders.)

Fourth, psychological factors seem to conspire against razzmatazz, pizzazz and all that jazz. The magnitude of the event melts some of the iciest nerves, and there are no second, third and fourth games to recover. And there are relatively few rabid fans with full-throated, deranged passion to rouse players because the teams play at a neutral site. So the anticipation, rather than the play, becomes the important event, the memorable event. The passion is invested in preparations and partying.

Football being a corporate game—organization usually prevailing over genius—what you get is a giant football convention. It's not who wins or loses, it's who makes the sale. Dozens of corporations use the Super Bowl as a sales rally or for goodwill. One large company, which spends millions of dollars advertising on pro football telecasts, gets an allotment of 2,500 tickets to distribute to dealers and customers. Another one invites a dozen or more players (from teams not playing in the Super Bowl) to mingle with guests, and media stars get up to $5,000 to say a few well-chosen words. Former players also materialize as guides for travel tours, while active golf and tennis pros are hired for a weekend of fun and games with worthy executives and prospective buyers.

The National Football League is right in there pitching, too. Its properties division, which merchandises NFL-endorsed products, gives seminars on how to peddle cigarette lighters, pens, T-shirts and other indispensable items. The Super Bowl of parties is thrown for the press, although anyone who has written a postcard in the last decade is eligible to come, and does. It's one of those nice little sitdown parties for four or five thousand, held in places like the Astrodome in Houston or the Queen Mary in Long Beach.

Media critics frequently descend on the Super Bowl to observe the press observing whatever it observes. After all those exhibition, regular-season and playoff games, the press may well be observing the ceiling, praying for Sunday to come, like political reporters coming up to election day. The press often is criticized for mindlessly doing the NFL's bidding, blowing up its balloon. But even the most conscientious reporting and skepticism have the effect of helium: anything you write or say hypes the game.

HOW THE MEN IN THE STRIPED SHIRTS SEE THEIR JOBS

By Larry Bortstein

Bob Frederic, 50, of Denver has been a National Football League official since 1968, the last six years as a referee. Recently FAMILY WEEKLY discussed the life and pressures of being an NFL official with Frederic at his office on a quiet street in east Denver.

FAMILY WEEKLY: What are the responsibilities of the different officials?

FREDERIC: All officials are expected to call any major infraction of the rules. However, the way the six men are positioned on the field gives each one specific things to look for. [For positions of officials when play begins see diagram below.]

The field judge mainly looks for pass interference on long pass plays, rules on fair catches on punts and watches the 30-second clock for delay of game.

The back judge has some of the same responsibilities as the field judge. He also watches for pass interference, and on plays near his sideline, he determines whether a player is in or out of bounds.

The line judge watches the first contact after the ball is snapped, makes certain that when the quarterback passes the ball forward he's behind the line of scrimmage and often watches the first contact between a potential receiver and the defensive back to make sure there's no excessive bumping.

The umpire is alert to the immediate contact between linemen when the ball is snapped. Holding by an offensive player is one of the major infractions he watches for. The umpire has a great deal to do with controlling the tempo of the game between the offensive and defensive lines.

The head linesman is in charge of the chains for first-down measurements and has duties which are similar to the line judge. However, since there is no back judge on his side of the field, he often has to break downfield to watch the contact between receivers and pass defenders. His responsibility calls for more movement than any other official.

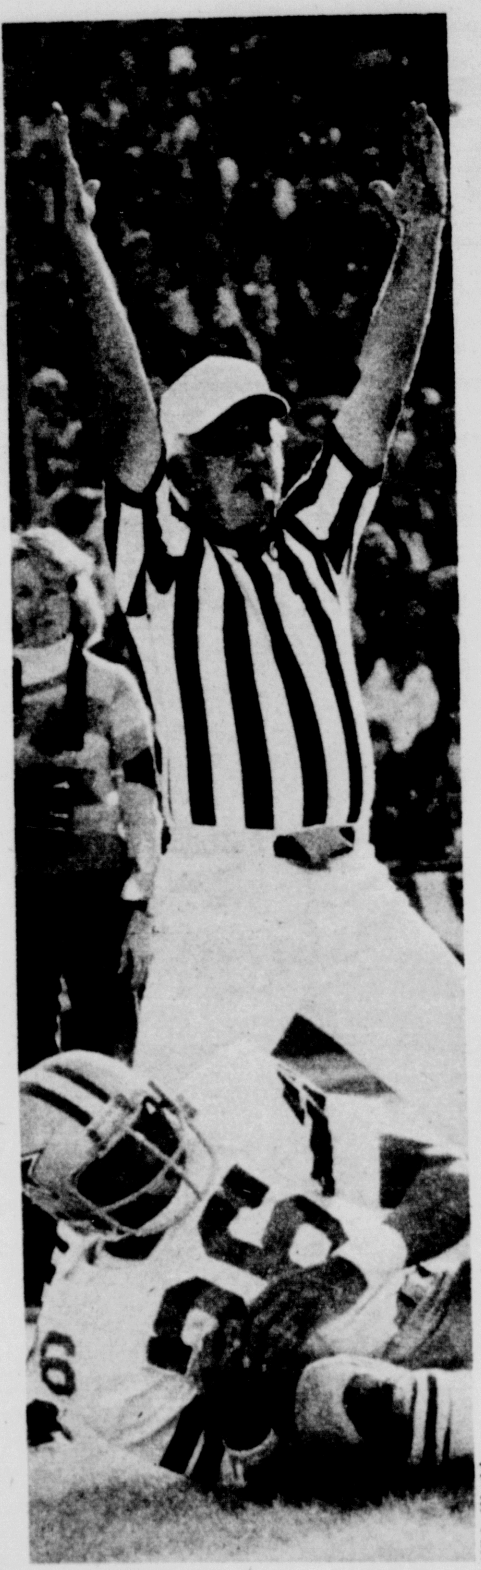
The referee, besides being the head official and explaining decisions to the coaches and spectators, also rules on roughing the passer and punter. Basically, the referee's role is exaggerated. Often he gets credit for a game that's well-worked when the other officials actually have done 95 percent of the work. By the same token, sometimes he takes the blame unfairly when a game has gotten out of hand.

FW: Isn't every official's ambition to be a referee?

FREDERIC: Definitely not. Many men want to be nothing other than head linesmen or field judges or whatever. The referee really is not better than any other official. Some men come out of the college ranks as referees but go into another position in the pros.

FW: How are officials "discovered"?

FREDERIC: The NFL has 10 full-time "observers." They are retired officials who watch games in their geographical area and look for officials who might be qualified to join the NFL. An observer might watch a man work for a couple of years before the league decides he's qualified to come in.



Wide World

FW: How can a man get started as an official?

FREDERIC: Of course, I can only speak for myself. I played some football at the University of Colorado and didn't want to go into coaching, so I began working little league games for no pay. Later I worked high-school games, then small-college games, then major-college games. This is the usual way it's done. Along the way, the experienced officials watch you, see how you come along and recommend you for higher jobs.

Top pay for an official is about $600 per game and is based on seniority, although most people think the referee is always paid the most. In addition, all of us have full-time jobs in other fields.

FW: Why does the NFL divide its officials into crews with the same six men working together all the time?

FREDERIC: Men get to know each other and work together well when they're a team. The league tries to get a balance between older and younger officials within each six-man crew. The only time the six men in a crew might be split up is in the conference playoffs and the Super Bowl. Then, the league rightfully sends the men who have given the best performance during the regular season.

FREDERIC: The crew meets in the selected city on Saturday night and watches movies of the game it worked the previous week. Each of us also studies a copy of the play-by-play for that game, on which one of the four men running the officials' office at NFL headquarters in New York has made notes pertaining to specific situations. Sometimes these comments can be pretty caustic, and we deserve it.

FREDERIC: Most of us are stationed on the perimeter of the action when the ball is snapped and basically stay there. If an official is caught inside, in most cases he's made a gross error. But the umpire, who stations himself right behind the defensive line, is popped, and popped often and hard.

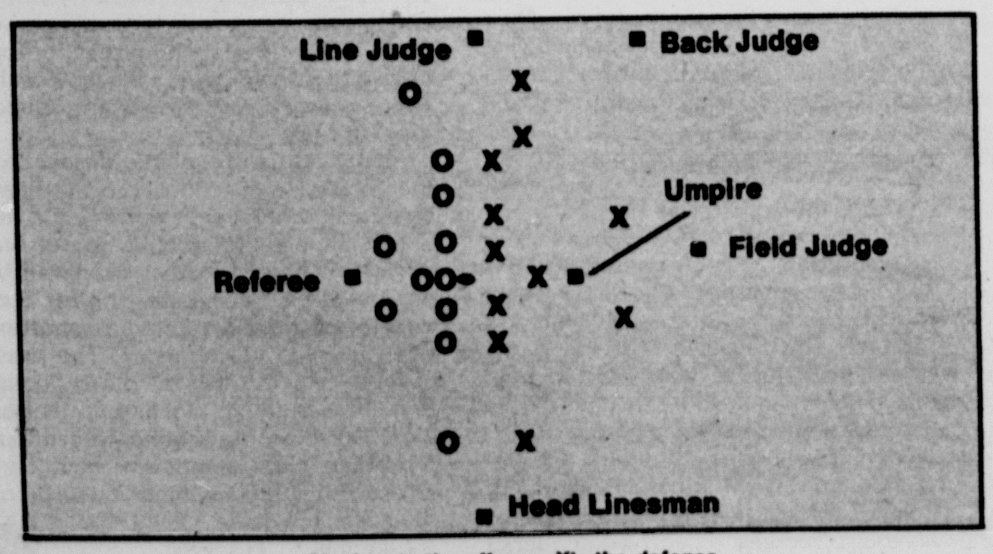
FW: What about the holding penalties? This is perhaps the most difficult and controversial part of the official's job.

FREDERIC: No question. If we were supertechnical and called every little thing we saw, the game would become a mockery. But we have to call the flagrant penalties that obviously affect the outcome of a play. In a game we worked early this season between the Rams and 49ers, the Rams were called for holding four times within a few minutes. There was no question about the penalties. Holding was a big penalty this season. What the players try to get away with changes each year. Coaches don't go out and try to teach dirty football, but each year you'll find different types of penalties because the defenses are so good and changing all the time; the offenses sometimes react out of frustration.

FW: Having been on the field for last year's Super Bowl, would you say that the pressures of working a Super Bowl are greater for an official than an ordinary game?

FREDERIC: There's no way you can deny it. You know everything's riding on this game. But going out and living with that pressure is the mark of a professional official. He has to put everything but the game out of his mind. He can't do the job well unless he brings total concentration to it. If he loses concentration at a crucial moment, that's just when the roof is going to cave in on him.

Of course, whether it's the Super Bowl or a game between a couple of teams which haven't won a game all year, the professional official gives his maximum effort and concentration. The fans expect the players to perform all-out every game, and the players have a right to expect the same from us.



O's denote the offense, X's the defense

HEAVY GOLD ELECTROPLATE (HGE)– this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and the gold, by government standard, is 14 times thicker than the designated "gold electroplate."

STERLING SILVER (SS)– the mounting is 92.5% pure silver, 7.5% other metals for strength, and to eliminate tarnishing is lightly plated with precious rhodium.

GOLD FILLED (GF)– a lamination of Base Metal placed between sheets of gold.

PRACTICAL TIPS FOR HOUSEWIVES ON FINDING THE JOBS THEY WANT

Have you ever had any kind of volunteer experience? If the answer is "yes," there probably is a good full- or part-time job waiting for you now in your community.

By Shirley Sloan Fader

Today Adele Lerner has a private office, a secretary and a staff of employees and volunteers she supervises. Five years ago, however, she was frightened out of her mind at the thought of trying to get a job: "I married at 18, had four children and never held a paying job. At 40, my children were growing up, and I wanted a job. But what could I apply for? Though I'd had some college education, I had no job training. Who would hire me?"

Adele quickly discovered that employment agencies offered her nothing but salesgirl jobs or simple clerical ones. "You have no recent job experience," they told her. "Eventually," says Adele, "I realized my only chance was to use the experience I did have—my volunteer work."

With the Yellow Pages as her guide, Adele called the American Cancer Society, American Heart Association and Community Chest offices in her New Jersey home town. She explained to each director that she'd chaired committees, been an officer, headed fund-raising projects for the PTA and various other organizations. "I'd like a chance to fund raise for you," she said. Two of them were interested, and she accepted the Heart Association's offer—$100 a week for part-time fund-raising. She did so well that six months later, when the full-time executive director left, Adele was offered the director's position at an appropriate salary. "I learned the details of my job as I went along," says Adele, "but the volunteer work gave me the basic knowledge I needed. I learned that any community group that depends on the public is a good employment possibility for a woman with a volunteer record as a fund raiser. For instance, she could go to the Hospital Fund, Boys' Club, Volunteer Ambulance Corps, Red Cross, Teen Recreation Center, etc. Another advantage is that many of these jobs are part-time, which would exactly suit many women."

For her book, Any Woman Can Start in the Middle, to be published in the spring, Shirley Sloan Fader collected the experiences of 500 housewives who started careers in middle age. She also interviewed dozens of job counselors, industrial psychologists and employment experts. This article is based on her research. Mrs. Fader writes the regular FAMILY WEEKLY feature, People And You.

Almost every American housewife has had some volunteer experience. Not a lot, just some. When the housewife stops saying, "Oh, it was nothing, just a little volunteer job," she's on her way to translating that volunteer work into well-paid employment. For example, the United States Department of Labor reports that bookkeeping is an understaffed occupation. Employers are looking for people with a talent for figures—which could include the woman who has worked skillfully as a club treasurer. Once in a bookkeeping job, women can be rapidly promoted.

For Eleanor Van Orden of Florida, it took four years to rise from bookkeeper to office manager. She was 51 when she started, and it didn't "just happen." Eleanor improvised, using her wits, took the advice of bookkeeper friends and did some self-study at home. As she learned more and more about bookkeeping and office procedures, she kept applying for and getting better jobs with greater responsibility. "Yet it's definitely my experience in women's group activities that gives me the people-handling talents I use as office manager," Eleanor declares.

Claire Richards of Pasadena, Calif. believes women may undervalue their volunteer credentials because they don't fully appreciate what they've learned. "You get feedback in any volunteer job. You make mistakes. Eventually you sort through to what succeeds and learn what doesn't. You even learn how to phrase sentences to get people to cooperate and how to function with many different kinds of people. These are valuable business talents."

The housewife who has produced publicity or a newsletter for her volunteer group also has a salable skill. She can collect a sample kit of her work and approach local public-relations firms, neighborhood newspapers, private businesses.

For many housewives, their favorite volunteer activity itself can become their paid job. When inflation deflated the value of her husband's paycheck and nudged a Michigan woman into job-hunting, she thought she'd have to abandon the Girl Scout work she loved. "Then I realized that with my 10 years of volunteer Scouting, I knew the organization well. I could apply for one of the paid staff jobs." She did and got it.

Other women notice community needs as they go about their volunteer assignments. About a decade ago Pauline Graivier and Gloria Hoffman of Dallas, Texas were members of the YWCA board of directors when they realized how insecure many women felt about accepting organization responsibilities. The women lacked confidence, especially the courage to stand up and speak at a meeting. Together, Gloria and Pauline developed a confidence-building, public-speaking course and offered it at the Y. It went so well a nearby community college allowed them to offer communications courses. Two-and-a-half years after they began at the Y, they were in business for themselves.

Some housewives, like Judi Kahn, find that volunteering just to learn something can spark a career. Judi is only 28 and still very occupied with her young children. Like so many people nowadays, she has acquired a large variety of plants. "Solely to learn how to take care of them," she hired a baby sitter for a few hours a week and volunteered to work at her town's plant shop. By adding reading to her practical work, she learned to diagnose plant ailments and prescribe for them. Thus, she realized that owners of large sick plants found it awkward to haul them to the store, so Judi became a plant doctor. She makes "house calls" at $20 a visit.

The questions every housewife has to ask herself are: "What have I done? What skills have I developed?" Then, it's a matter of packaging the knowledge properly for employers. Harriet Lefkowith, who has worked with Catalyst, the national women's career counseling organization, and who now heads the Women's Institute of a community college, suggests that instead of listing jobs or activities as "volunteer," a woman should list competencies. That way she'll be interpreting her volunteer work in business terms. She'll be using headings like "administrative experience," "sales experience," "financial experience," "organizing experience," "personnel experience."

Perhaps a woman has worked on a town project for the Garden Club. Her resumé might discuss her knowledge like this:

Administrative Experience:
Represented organization in deciding Garden Club projects with Town Council.
I and two other committee members arranged locale of work with town Parks' Commission.
We supervised all plantings.

Purchasing Experience:
I and two committee members invited bids and purchased $2,000 worth of trees and shrubs at 10 percent less than previous year's Garden Club project costs. We negotiated contract with landscape architect at "commercial," not "retail" rates.

Though she hasn't claimed total credit for the accomplishments, the woman has translated her volunteer activities into business terms an employer will recognize and value.

As she presents her volunteer credits properly, a housewife must also project seriousness of purpose. Creating an aura of looking for a job "to fill my time" or "because we could use the money" is self-defeating. One senior executive reacted this way: "I'm not running an adult camp to keep women busy with 'interesting' jobs. I need people who will concentrate on what they can offer the business and who will take their jobs seriously."

Even when they've analyzed their abilities and are convinced they have something to offer, many housewives may hesitate: "With the emphasis on youth, who will hire me? I've been home 15 (or 20 or 30) years. I'm afraid I'm too old."

Don't worry. A recent in-depth study of American workingwomen reported by the huge Esmark Corporation revealed that 14,481,000 American workingwomen are 40 or older and that employers have found "older is better; older women are more dependable workers." Employers in every occupation have observed this same pattern. They'll be pleased to see the housewife who has proved herself in volunteer activities.

HOW TO HAVE A BETTER MARRIAGE

Too many couples play verbal and mental games with each other—sometimes unknowingly—in order to cover up their real feelings. The result can be serious marital problems.

True slashes tar in half!

5 MGS. TAR

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Regular: 5 mgs. "tar", 0.4 mgs. nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report-October 1976.

By Cathrina Bauby

Early in our lives, we learned that it is not proper to discuss certain subjects. Among these taboos are sex, money, morals, personal problems and idiosyncrasies. We learned not to talk about these issues, especially with someone of the opposite sex, because it "isn't nice." Therefore, little wonder that these are five of the leading causes of divorce, and unless these topics are discussed openly, marital problems can result.

To have a comfortable married relationship, we are discovering that people can and should discuss matters that in the past were culturally unacceptable. And more and more couples are doing just that: no longer is it necessary for the male to keep his feelings and emotions to himself or for the woman to suffer in silence. As a result, couples are beginning to enjoy greater personal pleasure and mutually shared understanding and joy, and the roles in which men and women were cast in the past are changing. There is a new openness, a new candor, which promises to relieve tensions, misunderstanding and distrust.

Still, the process is not complete. Although people may recognize the possibility of a more effective relationship when they do not keep their mates guessing about their innermost feelings, there are two major factors that keep too many from opening up with each other: fear and manipulation.

Fear. Over morning coffee, Francine and Martha were talking. Francine said, "Oh, if only I could talk with Jeff the way I can talk with you, it would be so easy. But I'm afraid if I told him what I'm really thinking, he not only would be upset and wouldn't understand, it would also make him mad at me."

In these sentences, Francine demonstrates that she fears Jeff's rejection, fears he won't understand, fears she is not living up to his expectations of her, fears disappointing him and fears his anger.

The worst fear most of us experience is that of exposing ourselves to our partners. We fear being vulnerable or that what we say might be used against us. We fear sharing ourselves because some weakness or prejudice might become known—or because we may become aware of what we really are thinking and feeling. So we rationalize that "the problem needn't be discussed" because it may be misconstrued. By doing this, we keep our mates guessing about our true feelings.

To come to grips with these fears, the only possible solution is to talk about the issue and face it. When we recognize that fear is inherent in every human being, we can better cope with the feeling. We have to face it and deal with it openly. This is the fastest way to relieve the tension and anxiety it can cause.

Manipulation. After a party one evening, Debbie and Scott were driving home. Their silence was tense and uncomfortable. Finally, Debbie said, "I don't like your flirting with all those women, Scott. You're my husband, and I'm jealous of the way you acted. You made a fool of yourself." Snapping back, Scott said, "You've opened your eyes. At least my flirting gets your attention. I'm tired of being ignored. When I try to talk with you, you're too busy to listen. So flirting is one way to get you to talk with me."

At the party, Scott was manipulating Debbie to gain her attention through the time-honored use of jealousy. Spouses often play such cat-and-mouse-games in order to draw attention to a problem that they cannot discuss directly. What a mate is really asking is, "Do you love me?"

At other times, we withhold information thinking the person is holding out on us. Being human, we tend to rationalize that "This point isn't worth bothering my wife about," or "My husband will never know if I don't tell him," or "If I just keep it to myself, maybe it'll never get out." Wouldn't it be better to share our feelings with our mates—to tell the other person what is going on—and not make the assumption that he or she might not understand or be interested. It's energy-consuming and time-wasting to keep our partners in the dark.

Of course, you are vulnerable if you expose your thoughts and feelings to one another. If a partnership is to be meaningful both will be vulnerable to each other. This is one reason why two people can be so close—they have been trusting and open with each other. Concealment, however, produces daily tension that is poison to our mental and physical selves.

Of course, being honest means we are taking a chance, but the comfort we can achieve in expressing ourselves will come to us only when we do it. Our option, otherwise, is strained and faulty relations in which we continue to wear the mask of the pretender. Relations are bound to be uncomfortable until both sides are open with each other. To be more comfortable, dare to share the real you with your husband or wife.

"I thought I'd need a salesman's personality to be out selling Avon. Not true at all. I do fine just being myself!" Cynthy Gravitt

Tustin, California

"I'm not the aggressive type and I'm shy about meeting new people. But selling Avon cosmetics really is a friendly business. My customers are happy to see me and make me feel welcome. It's amazing how much confidence I've built up since I became an Avon Representative.

Running my own business gives me a great deal of freedom. I'm able to work Avon around my family life. If my son Chad gets a cold, I can be with him as long as he needs me. That's the beauty of being your own boss.

All in all, Avon has made a beautiful difference in my life. It keeps me fresh and young. I'm more conscious of the way I look. And I've made a lot of new friends. Best of all, Avon has taught me I can just be myself, and everything else falls right into place."

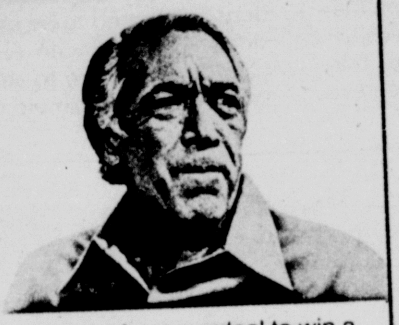
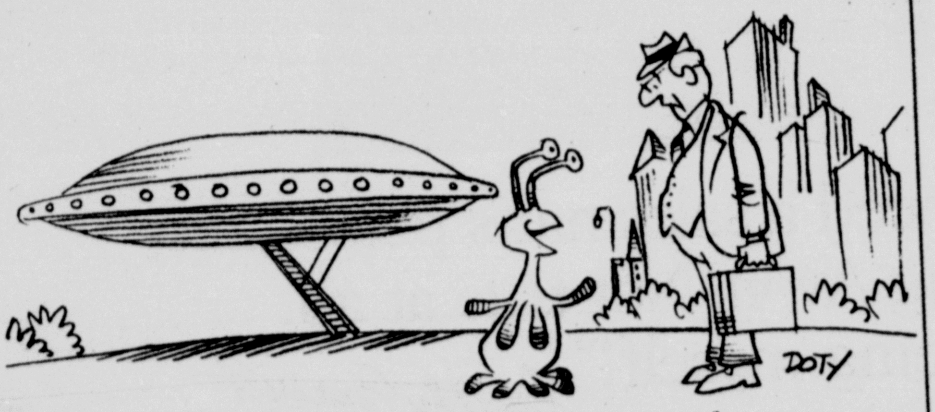
Observations™



Perspective on the World. That's what Anthony Quinn has, thanks to his extensive travels. He'll share his perspective with you as he narrates the "Mobil Showcase" TV series, Ten Who Dared, about some of history's most remarkable explorers. And the on-location filming of much of the action will transport you from Columbus's Spain to the South Pole, where Roald Amundsen and four companions survived a frozen ordeal to win a place in history.

Some Victorian! Mary Kingsley wasn't your typical Victorian Englishwoman. When both her parents died after she had spent her first 30 years caring for her invalid mother, Miss Kingsley decided to carry on her father's work in natural history. Her travels among the Fang people of West Africa in 1893 make for an amazing adventure. But her journey was a short one compared with the 999 arduous days that newspaper reporter Henry Morton Stanley spent exploring the length of the Congo River.

The West. The Sierras and the deserts of North America provide the locale for the story of Jedediah Smith. In 1826 Smith, a fur trapper, became the first white man to cross the frontier from Utah to California. A very different locale—the lush and deadly Venezuelan jungle—is the setting for the adventures of Alexander von Humboldt, who became known as the father of geography. And in the Peruvian Andes, the greed of Francisco Pizarro destroys the Inca civilization.



"COULD YOU DIRECT ME TO THE EXPLORERS CLUB?"

Around the globe. The other explorers depicted in the series are: Captain James Cook, the mariner who charted vast areas of the South Pacific; Robert Burke and William Wills, whose crossing of Australia has been called "the most disastrous success" in exploration history; and Charles Doughty, the first Christian Englishman to live among the Bedouins without denying his faith.

Enriching your life. These ten hour-long documentary dramas will shrink your world and bring history into your living room. They're entertainment—and education—for the whole family. Check your local TV listings for the first episode, Christopher Columbus, which will be shown on most stations later this week. And watch for this symbol, just as a reminder.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Could repainting your child's room make him hostile?

How Colors Affect Everybody's Life

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Colorful surroundings can increase your child's IQ.
2. When a person is depressed, he becomes so sensitive to the colors around him that drab colors deepen his feeling of depression while colorful surroundings give his mood a quick shot in the arm.
3. Color preferences are related to certain personality characteristics.
4. Though infants may be attracted to bright, shiny objects, they do not have color preferences because all colors look alike to them.
5. Many people have a "colorful night life" without going out of the house.
6. Most "color-blind" people aren't blind to all colors—they just can't see certain colors.

ANSWERS

1. True. Munich's Psychological Institute study of the effects of color on a random sample of more than 400 children found that, when tested in rooms painted in a "happy color"—light blue, yellow or orange—average IQ scores were raised appreciably. And a significant decrease in average scores was recorded when the children were tested in "ugly rooms" drably painted in black, brown and white. Another finding: when the experimental group of children was sequestered in the pleasantly colored rooms, its positive reactions (as measured by friendly words and smiles) increased markedly, and negative reactions (hostility, irritableness) declined sharply.
2. False. Studies show that when a person feels down-in-the-dumps, there is a marked decrease in his response to color. It's also been pointed out that "the depressed individual is withdrawn and generally uninterested in his external environment."
3. True. A University of North Carolina study, which assessed the color preferences of gifted and creatively talented children, showed blue the most preferred color, with green ranking second. Interesting sex differences prevailed with several colors: 45 percent of the boys preferred red, but only 28 percent of the girls did; 58 percent of the girls were partial to yellow, but just slightly over half that many boys went along with them. Biggest sex difference was with pink, which was cited by 32 percent of the girls but by only 2 percent of the boys.
4. False. A University of Arkansas study of infants ranging from four through eleven months of age revealed that many—though not all—babies not only have developed color vision but "showed responses indicative of individual color preference." What colors do babies like best? Tests showed that red and yellow objects were preferred more often than black or blue. And though babies' clothes are often "baby" blue, only one of more than 100 infants studied showed a preference for that color.
5. True. Many people are entertained by vivid dreams in technicolor. On the other hand, millions spend their nights dreaming colorless dreams in drab grays or black and white. To find out why some dream in color and others don't, studies conducted at London's City University explored various aspects of the phenomenon. One of the most curious discoveries: even in the most colorful dreams studied, deep purple, blues and blue-greens were extremely rare. As to why many people's dreams have no color at all, the findings suggest that in colorless dreams "the areas of the visual cortex within the eye which seem to respond only to color may be inoperative" for these people during sleep.
6. True. Most so-called color-blind people have difficulty only in certain color areas. It has been noted, for example, that some confuse yellow with red, or red with green, and others have difficulty seeing blue. One leading scientist reports that there are a few people who can see all the colors of the spectrum with one eye but not with the other.

THE $12,000.00 HOUSEWIFE

By Edward C. Lane, Ph.D

My name is Edward C. Lane. I'm a college professor.

What I'm about to tell you may be hard to believe. Because I'm going to show you how to make money . . . more money than you ever dreamed possible . . . at home . . . in your spare time. This has nothing to do with any company "selling" plan or "work-at-home" scheme. It's totally different. In fact, if you're creative it may actually double your present income. Here are the facts:

Several years ago at a faculty bridge party, one of the guests began discussing a special "money project." The secret was literally whispered across the table.

My wife and I discussed the idea on the way home and decided to try it.

The project kept us busy about four hours a week. We used our kitchen table as an office.

At first our earnings were low—$25.00 to $30.00 a week. But as the months went by, we began making thousands of dollars at home on the weekends. It was almost beyond belief.

Obviously, this was too good to keep to ourselves. So I explained the project to my mother. She was over seventy and lived alone in an apartment in Akron. But within the first 87 days she made over $2,200.00 in cash from the same money project.

As our curiosity grew, we discovered a variety of other people making money but with somewhat different money projects.

1. Consider the case of Mary Rittenhouse from Cleveland. For over six years she's been earning thousands of dollars at home in her spare time.

- She provides a needed service in her neighborhood.
- No one comes to her home — nor does she go to anyone else's.
- She uses only her telephone, a spiral notebook and a small filing box.
- She makes up to $100.00 per week, spare time.
- Her service requires no technical skill of any kind.
- Mary works for no one else. She does no selling whatsoever. Most of her clients call her at home.
- What she does is so moral and supremely honest she could probably get a written endorsement from most clergymen.
- Her service is so simple that almost anyone could start the same project in just 9 days.

Again, these data are accurate or we couldn't—and wouldn't—print them.

2. John and Irene Tendy started this same special money project over 10 years ago. They report earnings as high as $12,000.00 per year . . . all earned at home.

3. An Oregon husband-wife team started the same project we started. In a recent letter they reported gross income of $14,000.00 IN ONLY 45 DAYS! That's even better than we did!

Obviously, this is exceptional income. What you make is largely up to you. But the income potential of these money projects is staggering! For example, two Colorado women started a money project several years ago with only twelve dollars. This year—operating full time—they made over $82,000.00. This income was verified in a recent national press report.

HOW TO START

You don't need "money." Most of these projects can be started on less than $25.00. . . many on less than $10.00.

You don't need a car for most projects . . . in a few cases it would be helpful, but not necessary.

You don't need youth. Maturity and experience are excellent assets.

Best of all, you don't need to wait. As we said before, many of these projects can be started in just 9 days.

You'll discover amazing money projects . . .

- for husband-wife teams,
- for people living in apartments,
- for suburban or rural families,
- for retired people,
- for teenagers.

AFTER YOU'VE READ OUR BOOK, LET US HEAR FROM YOU. WRITE AND TELL US HOW YOUR MONEY PROJECT IS WORKING. IF YOU HAVE PROBLEMS OR QUESTIONS, EXPLAIN THEM TO US. WE'LL TRY TO HELP.

THE DOCTOR LETS YOU IN

What You Should Know About Cold Sores

Your morning orange juice burns your mouth. You head for the bathroom mirror, look inside your mouth and see a red, angry-looking, punched-out area on the gum or cheek. Doctors call this aphthous ulcer or herpes of the mouth—you're more likely to call it a cold sore and a real nuisance.

Cold sores or fever blisters of this type often appear on the outside of the lip as well. They're caused by a virus which lives in the body. A rise in body temperature due to fever, overexposure to the sun or the second half of the menstrual cycle can cause the bug to flare up. If the sore lasts long enough, it may be coupled with a swollen gland or two under the jaw.

We know that some people seem more prone to these sores because their bodies don't build up good antibody protection against the herpes virus. What we don't know is how to make the sore disappear.

For reasons that are not clear, taking capsules of a compound that changes the intestinal flora is helpful to some people—particularly if they start taking the capsules the moment they feel a fever blister coming on. But preparations of this kind are available only by prescription; so you'll have to discuss possible use with your physician. He may suggest that washing the mouth with tetracycline will be helpful in making you feel more comfortable. You break open a capsule, put it in a teaspoon of water and then swish it around like a mouthwash. Novacaine-like medicines can be gargled in much the same way to ease the pain. Certain medications may be applied directly to the gum for relief, too. Recently, doctors painted sores with a red dye and exposed them to the light of an ordinary fluorescent reading lamp for a few minutes. The dye-light treatment seems to make the virus noninfectious, but new studies warn that the virus may then become dangerous and could raise possible cancer-causing viruses.

Tip: Herpes is contagious, so keep your mouth away from other mouths until the sores go away. —Irwin J. Polk, M.D.

ANTIQUES ARE FOR EVERYONE

If you know how to buy, you can still find great bargains – some for as little as $10. So read on!

By Gray Davis Boone

Did you know that chances are nine out of 10 that you have an antique? And one whose value will increase each year? You may think of antiques as costing thousands—or even millions—like the Rembrandt that recently sold for $3.25 million.

If so, readjust your thinking. There are literally thousands of antiques available in everything from prints to glass to jewelry that can be bought for less than $100. And even though the $15 print or the $75 chest of drawers doesn't make the news, you'll find them all over the United States in auction galleries and shops. To get you started, here are just a few "eminently collectible" categories.

Prints. Original 19th-century works sell for as little as $10 and are attractive, inexpensive wall decorations.

Silver. Wonderful buys are available in American silver. Prices cover a broad range but can be as low as $6.

Jewelry. Prices are rising fast in this very popular area, but good buys still can be found in 19th-century, Art Deco and Art Nouveau jewelry. Remember, too, that antique jewelry is often less expensive than new jewelry of similar gem content.

Textiles. Primitive quilts, coverlets, some hooked rugs and hand-woven linens are still sold for under $100.

Porcelain and Pottery. This category offers a wide range of styles and practical use for collectors who look for pieces in the $50 range.

How to Be a Smart Buyer

Until you're really "educated" in the field you've chosen to collect from, you should carefully follow these Do's and Don't's of smart buying. Don't make a purchase without getting from the dealer a documented bill of sale including style, date, condition, price and an agreement that the dealer will take back the piece if it doesn't live up to this description. Do read and learn about your area of interest. First, try your local museum and see what it has in your field. Check your library, too, and remember that auction and museum catalogues are excellent textbooks. Antique shows in your area are an invaluable way to find out about current prices. Don't be embarrassed about questioning dealers, either. Don't get trapped by "auction fever." Always set the price you'll pay before the bidding starts. When that price is reached, stop bidding.

Gray Boone is founder and editor of Antique Monthly, the largest publication in the world on fine arts and antiques. This month Antique Monthly, in cooperation with the New York Winter Antique Show, is sponsoring the Third Annual World Antiques and Fine Arts Market Conference to study the activities and trends of the field. Complete information is available through Antique Monthly, P.O. Drawer 2, Tuscaloosa, Ala. 35401.

THE MOVEMENT IN TODAY'S EDUCATION IS BACK TO BASICS

Schools are rejecting the permissiveness of the last decade and are going back to the 3R's – just the same as when you were a kid.

NEA/Joe Di Dio

By Grace Hechinger

"This school will emphasize good study habits and a quiet, orderly environment which many children need in order to learn. . . . A majority of school hours will be devoted to the teaching of reading, writing, spelling, language and arithmetic."

Sound like the good old days? It's not. In fact, it's from the prospectus for a new school in Palo Alto, Calif., and schools like it, with an unapologetic devotion to the "3R's" of reading, writing and arithmetic, are springing up nationwide.

Of course, there are schools throughout the country that have never given up on this philosophy. What the Palo Alto and other schools suggest is that the education pendulum has swung back. Once again parents are reminded that the development of skills and the acquisition of knowledge must be given high priority.

What accounts for this new emphasis now? Essentially, the return to the more traditional approach to learning is a reaction to the freewheeling 1960's. With its stress on "doing your own thing," the theme of that restless decade was liberation—freedom from all restraints. Education reformers called for liberation from the teacher-dominated classroom and even from a planned curriculum. They criticized schools as "oppressive." In their search for freedom, schools moved pupils out of the classroom altogether and into museums, hospitals, business offices, libraries or even the streets or fields. Others abandoned tests and grades or allowed children to progress at their own pace, often in mixed age groups, sometimes even with parents substituting as teachers. Yet, in spite of such excesses, many so-called "open" schools were indeed beneficial for children who had not responded to the standardized approach perhaps because they were either too far ahead of or too far behind the prescribed lesson plan.

What does the "return to basics" mean for parents?

It means more drills, more spelling tests and more rote memorizing of multiplication tables. It means more control by the teacher and a more standardized program for the entire class.

You will notice the difference because you will find out more quickly what your child is accomplishing. For example, you may be either pleased or puzzled to discover that Jimmy

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Dorothy S. Gelatt (Babyhood by Penelope Leach)

The $1,000 Baby
How much does it cost to have a baby?

The thousand-dollar baby is here. Hospital and doctor bills for a birth now average $1,189 nationally. Complications can push the cost up to $5,000. And that's just to get the baby home. To put him or her in diapers, gowns, blankets and bottles, new parents spend hundreds more. A Florida newspaper study of prices for a complete nursery, including furniture and some maternity clothes for the expectant mother, shows these items can run the cost of a newborn up another $1,000. Milk and food costs weren't included in the study. Medical insurance and gifts from friends and family usually help defray costs, but the biggest burden still falls on the expectant parents. In 1964, the study found, expenses for a typical Miami newborn ran about $415, including $250 for the obstetrician and $165 for a three-day stay in a semiprivate room. Twelve years later, the cost averages $540 for the obstetrician and $620 for the hospital.

Drug Use In High School

Marijuana use among high-school seniors now exceeds heavy drinking, says Robert DuPont, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse. And extensive pot-smoking among young people is on the rise. "The fact that 8.1 percent of America's high-school seniors this year reported virtually daily use of marijuana is a source of considerable concern," he said. (It was 6.1 percent in 1975.) The figures are based on a survey of 17,000 seniors at 125 high schools. Other findings included:

- Drug abuse, excluding alcohol and tobacco, drains from the economy each year $10.3-billion worth of lost work, medical and other social costs.
- More than 59 percent of the nation's youth has tried an unlawful drug.
- Drug use is highest in the 18- to 35-age group.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN
A Tramp is born

Charlie Chaplin came up with his tramp character on the spur of the moment while working for Mack Sennett's Keystone Cops in 1914. Sennett asked Chaplin to put on some comedy makeup, but Chaplin could not quite decide what to wear. "On my way to the wardrobe," recounted Chaplin, "I thought I would dress in baggy pants, big shoes, a cane and a derby hat. I wanted everything a contradiction: the pants baggy, the coat tight, the hat small and the shoes large. . . . I had no idea of the character. But the moment I was dressed, the clothes and the makeup made me feel the person he was. With the clothes on I felt he was a reality, a living person. He ignited all sorts of crazy ideas that I would never have dreamt of, until I was dressed and made up as the Tramp." From Clowns, by John H. Towsen (Hawthorn, $14.95).

Pictorial Parade

Disinherit Your Nephew
In Living Color

Now, thanks to the miracle of video tape, you may give your survivors just what's coming to them, even after your funeral. With the help of an optics company in Florida, you may make a legal video tape of your will, so all the heirs can hear and see you divvy up your fortune as you see fit. Video wills are recorded in the presence of attorneys and witnesses to assure legal soundness. Special effects are available—including slow motion and instant replay—so your no-good nephew can watch you leave him that dollar over and over again.

Quick Takes

The state with the highest prison population in 1976 was Texas, followed by California and Florida . . . Put this under man bites dog. A Jacksonville, Fla., surgeon has filed a $10,000 damage suit against the U.S. Postal Service, charging personal and professional "embarrassment" because of lousy mail delivery . . . Since her debut on CBS in 1971, Cher has worn more than 1,300 strange things on her head. Many appear to be wigs. Others were a hybrid of peacock feathers, stringed popcorn and chain mail . . . The same time-release technology that rids your dog of fleas for 90 days may soon control mosquitos for an entire summer. A major chemical company will begin marketing plastic pellets to be applied in locations where mosquitos may breed. Should be on the market in time for next year's mosquito season . . . Does your lettuce look limp? The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus might have the cure. It is now giving away its own inexhaustible supply of mineral-enriched fertilizer on a first-come, first-serve basis, in any town its units visit . . . Last—and maybe even least—no one's wearing berets anymore in France. Why has the romance gone flat? They look too ethnic, say the French.

A Different Kind Of Escape Clause

A man who is serving time for breaking out of the Armstrong County jail in Kittanning, Pa., has sued prison officials for $1 million for letting him escape. The suit was filed recently by Gary Palmer, 24, who escaped from jail last summer and is now serving a term of up to three years for the crime. Authorities said that Palmer and a guard were watching television when the guard left the room for four hours, during which time the jailbreak took place. Palmer claims the sheriff, the guard he was watching TV with and another guard were guilty of negligence because they did not prevent his flying the coop.

Good Cooking For People On Special Diets

There is a new cookbook especially for people who have upset stomachs or a more serious problem like ulcers, colitis or diverticulosis. It's called The Troubled Tummy Cookbook (Regency Publishers, $8.95), and author June Roth promises to present diets—liquid, soft, bland, low fat, low sodium, low purine and gluten-free—that are appetizing and interesting for the person who must eat with care.

Cotton-Burgers?

It may not be too long before you are picking cotton-burgers as a favorite meal. Scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's New Orleans research center have developed a method of separating protein from cottonseeds to use as meat additives. They can either coat food with the nutritious protein or use the protein as a tasty meat substitute. The experts promise mighty good eatin'.

BACK-TO-BASICS MOVEMENT

is being tested on his knowledge of the capital of Switzerland or even Iceland. A definite plus—if you want to have a hand in your child's education—is that it will be easier to help with homework, to go over his vocabulary and to help with mathematics drills because everything will seem much more like it was when you went to school.

In most instances, the return to basics includes a more structured approach to each lesson and a specific set of rules. Sometimes precise standards are spelled out, as in the statement that children will not "intimidate, harass or threaten other students, use profane language or gestures, [or] be disrespectful of another's property." Frequently these standards also include enforcement of strict dress codes and prohibition of long hair for boys and short skirts for girls. Occasionally, the New Math or other curricular reforms of earlier, less conservative periods may be dropped.

What are some problems to watch for?

Under pressure from the budget crunch and a desire to keep tabs on everyone, the return to basics can deteriorate into destructive academic rigidity just as easily as the "open" classroom can turn into chaos. Guard against an excessive amount of rote learning, begin to worry if your child does not understand what he is memorizing or if homework is measured solely by hours spent, not substance learned. Be wary if your youngster suddenly does not like school, is afraid of his teacher, seems obsessed with grades, does not read anything he does not have to. A school can be strict and still remain an interesting place where pupils feel comfortable and inspired to do more than the required minimum.

Another possible danger is lack of personal attention for your child. It is easier, particularly in these economically pressed times, to crowd more children into classes and compel all of them to join a mass lesson rather than to teach them with regard for individual capacity.

In addition, parents may or may not be pleased with a simultaneous resort to school discipline. For example, students in some 3R schools were ordered to march down the corridor in formation and in total silence. The prospectus for another school states: "Passages of classes or groups of students through the halls will be in single file, under adult supervision." Of course, parents could well be wary if there is excessive talk about discipline and punishment, especially talk of physical punishment.

It also can be argued that a good school has few discipline problems and little need for punitive measures or for stern deterrents. The few cases that do come up can be handled in an appropriate manner without constant reminders to parents and students about "shaping up." In fact, an atmosphere of orderly and friendly calm, together with clearly stated rules and expectations, both academic and personal, are far more effective than threats: When a little girl was asked how she liked her new structured school in Palo Alto, she said, "It's great." When pressed further and asked whether she thought it was better than the school she had previously attended, she replied, "It's more quiet. You can do things without being bothered."

A school superintendent summed up the positive view: "No, we're not repealing the 20th century, but we are putting more stress on skills everywhere. . . . No apologies for it either." But another educator warns: "Unfortunately, many of those who advocate a traditional education are also advocating the kind of education that equates . . . good citizenship with blind superpatriotism and education itself with indoctrination."

The best way for parents to react is not just to swim along with the tide of a fad or trend but to do what's right for the child—and that often means doing what ought to come naturally. If schools have fewer field trips or exciting projects and less opportunity for creativity, for instance, it is up to parents to provide their children with a chance to paint or to play the guitar at home, while the schools take care of basic skills. In the end, what really matters is how to adopt the best ingredients from the different trends and preserve concern for your individual child. Quality can be achieved in a school of any style, but, unfortunately, this goal is rarely attained in either a progressive or traditional school.

Most important, you as a parent must feel comfortable with the style and the approach of the school. You may not agree with every single rule, but, on balance, you must have confidence in the school as a whole. If your child is learning basic skills and enjoys school, the school must be doing something right.
